G. U. DEFEATS BROOKLYN POLY

Fast Brooklyn Team Falls Before Lightning Attack of Blue and Gray.

Brooklyn Polytechnic fell before the Hilltoppers last Friday night, January 28, on the courts by the score of 38-30. Georgetown completely outplayed the visitors, and although the score may seem to indicate that the teams were of equal caliber, the Hoya’s scored twelve of their points during a brilliant come-back in the middle of the second half, when Captain Zazalli and Florence were off the floor. Except at this stage of the game the northernmen were at no time dangerous, and as soon as the two regulars were sent back into the game Polytechnic’s rally was halted.

The floor-work of Captain Zazalli and Florence, together with the accurate and steady shooting of Flavin, were the main factors in the Blue and Gray victory. Nelson was the mainstay of the visiting five with his clever floor-work and shooting.

Georgetown took the lead almost as soon as the whistle blew, when after a scramble around the Poly basket, Flavin punched the ball into the net. Flavin followed up with another tally a few moments later as a result of clever passing by Florence and O’Connell. Nelson was the mainstay of the visiting five with his clever floor-work and shooting.

North Building, erected in 1795 and one of the oldest college buildings in the United States, was damaged by fire this morning. The loss, which was covered partially by insurance, has not been estimated. Most of the damage was done by water. The flames were confined almost entirely to the top floor. The origin of the fire is doubtful, as the room in which it started was a store room and unoccupied.

Water seeped through to the main floor, threatening to destroy a valuable collection of old laces and paintings. The flames were hard to approach and several firemen were injured attempting to smother them. Moving picture camera men were quickly on the scene of the conflagration. Major Hobson, Commandant of the R. O. T. C., rendered great aid in directing the operations of the students assisting the firemen. Fortunately the living rooms of the men just below the place where the fire started were unoccupied. The flames were practically extinguished within an hour and a half after they were first discovered.

North Building is rich in tradition. George Washington honored it with his presence, and during Madison’s administration it was used as the seat of Congress after the national capitol had been burned.

There were many funny moments during the conflagration. Nero and his fiddling while Rome burned didn’t have a thing on some wild Junior, who set up his Victrola on the roof of North Porch, and while the water fell in cascades about him and the flames were bursting from the third story, put on that soulful record, “Keep The Homes Fires Burning.”

“Are the women and children all saved,” called P. S. Lauinger, the vlliant president of ’22, and adding, “You get the children,” made a mad dash for the burning building.

Clemens A. Sossong, of Carnegie, Pa., was all set in a Douglas Fairbanks’ pose for the movie camera men when other ambitious heroes of the screen made a headlong leap to get within range of the camera to send the pictures home to mother. When they were pulled apart Sossong was at the bottom with a sprained ankle and injured dignity.

The Boy Scouts responded nobly to the call, with Captain Paul D. Page leading the gas and hot-air attack. Paul Conley, better known as “Red”, did yeoman duty before the far-famed Washington fire brigade arrived. “Red” hails from McKees Rocks, in Pennsylvania. They haven’t yet heard of fire engines at the Rocks, so Conley’s experience with the bucket brigade served him in good stead.

Although it was almost high noon when the fire was first discovered, students reported to bear the names of Finn, Walsh, and Smith, were driven from the building in their pajamas.

Class of ‘22 Establishes Record. All Tickets Sold Two Weeks In Advance.

On the stroke of nine, next Monday night, the strains of a popular fox trot will formally open the much talked of Junior Prom to be held at Rauscher’s. All arrangements have been made, and there is to be no let-up to turn on the lights, tune up the weapons of the soldiers of synchronization and let the highly polished patiens do the rest.

From the opening note until the supper hour the Prom will be conducted along program lines. The program will consist of ten dances. Immediately following the supper dance there will be one short, exclusive little minuets for the Juniors. All others are requested to abstain from dancing during this interval, as it is a custom at Georgetown Proms to have one private dance for the class that is giving the affair. The time will be taken up, from the Junior dance until the terpsichorean activities cease at two o’clock with one long, continuous dance.

To provide the necessary musical enthusiasm for the Prom, the committee has engaged two of the best orchestras obtainable, who will play alternately throughout the evening. Sherbo’s Orchestra from New York City, of Hotel Vanderbilt, Club de Vingt, Colony Club, and Nyack Country Club fame, will offer for the approval of those in attendance the very latest pieces from New York, while Nichol’s Society Orchestra, from Washington, who are very well known all along the Atlantic Coast, will endeavor to outplay their brothers in harmony for a twenty-five dollar prize, and also for the prestige which such an accomplishment would merit. Mr. Nichols is very desirous of obtaining the hillenius business for future dances, and will do everything in his power to lend the cash prize.

An innovation which should prove interesting to all the “Prom Trotters” in attendance will be a rendition by the Washington orchestra of two pieces called, “When You Are Near” and “Sighing for You.” These pieces are the results of the musical genius of two Georgetown boys from the Shop, Mears, Baker and Fisch. It is rumored that “When You Are Near” will make its formal debut in a musical comedy in New York shortly.

Every ticket for the Prom has been sold, and there will be positively no admittance sold at the door. The limit has

G. U. RIFLE CLUB
MAKES PROGRESS

The recent starting of inter-collegiate matches by the rifle team of the Georgetown University of the R. O. T. C. has attracted much attention in other departments of the University besides the college. Major William H. Hobson, commander of the R. O. T. C., has been questioned repeatedly by men from the Law and Foreign Service Schools as to whether they would be allowed to shoot or enter competitions of the Rifle Club. Major Hobson stated in an interview that he would like to inform the downtown men that membership in the Rifle Club is not restricted to the R. O. T. C. or to the college, but is open to any man regularly enrolled in any department of the University, and that any man may use the ranges, and is eligible to fire on the Varsity Rifle team if he joins the club. Major Hobson states further:

"The Rifle Club now, numbers 135 members. Two teams of ten men each have been entered to represent the University in the inter-collegiate gallery matches of the National Rifle Association, which begin on February 1. Separate matches have been arranged with Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Syracuse, University of Vermont, University of Maine, Johns Hopkins University, and several others which will be added to the schedule later.

"A gallery range equipped to accommodate six targets at one time is now in operation in the basement of the Healy Building. The range is open for firing daily from noon until 5:30.

"Firing with the service model Springfield rifle will be started on the range back of the college buildings as soon as the weather permits. Later in the spring the National Guard ranges on Congress Heights will be used for this firing with the service rifle.

"By the gallery firing in inter-collegiate matches, annual championship matches are held by the National Rifle Association, usually at Camp Perry, Ohio, in connection with the national matches. Anyone belonging to a club organized under the N. R. A. is eligible to enter if his marksmanship is of championship caliber.

FOREIGN SERVICE NOTES.

Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the School of Foreign Service, has received a letter from Jochi Daigaku University, of Tokyo, Japan, informing him that two students of the Foreign Service school have begun their studies in the Japanese institution. They are Halleck Butts, of Texas, and Martin E. Scott, of Virginia, who are attaches in the office of the United States Minister to Japan. This is the first announcement of the working out of a plan between Georgetown and the Tokyo university by which the students will be exchanged. The examination marks of the students at Jochi Daigaku, for instance, will be credited toward their degrees at the Foreign Service school.

MARKS READ FOR FIRST SEMESTER

The results of the mid-year examinations were announced to the students of the College in Gaston Hall on Wednesday, February 2. The marks were read by the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., Dean of the College. He made a few remarks concerning the scholastic standing of the students. He also presented several prizes. After the Rev. John B. Creeden, S. J., President of the University, the classes for the second semester were called.

The Dean presented a solid gold medal with the impression of the University seal upon it to Sylvan J. Pauly, of Montanta, the winner of the short story contest of the College Journal. His story, "The Prophet," was the first prize by the editors, and was printed in the January issue of the College Journal. The Dean then commended those who did exceedingly well in their examinations. Those whom he named were: J. Donald McGuire, Charles F. McIsaac, and Cornelius Colbert, of the Senior Class; Sylvan J. Pauly and Charles L. B. Lownes, of the Junior Class; J. B. Fredricks and Edward Ducey, of the Freshman Class; B. Collins, J. Collins, and H. L. Campbell, of the Sophomore Class; J. L. Brown, and J. Gibson, of the Freshman Class; Ignatius J. Murane and Thomas R. Maittig, of the Sophomore Pre-Medical Class; Barrell, Fredricks and Edward Ducey, of the Freshman B. S. Class. After making a few comments on the general standing of the students, the Dean relinquished the floor to the President of the University.

Father Creeden joined in commending those who did so well in their examinations, and then proceeded into the main points of the address. He said that he felt, however, greater admiration for those who studied well and stayed up until the early hours of the morning, studying for the examinations. Cramming may get a man through the examination, but it will not make of him an educated man. It is only by daily and regular study that a man becomes educated. Like the muscles of an athlete, the mind of a man needs daily exercise if he wishes to succeed. If a runner were to pay no attention to his practice until the day before the race, and then run several hours that day, he would have slight chance of winning. The mind needs daily exercise to train it, as does the body of an athlete. Father Creeden said that if the boys of Georgetown are to take their proper places as leaders in this country, they must study regularly, and not cast aside all study until the week before the examinations. He then urged everybody to keep the good resolutions which they made at the mid-year examinations, and to make the second semester even better than the first.

After the exercises in Gaston Hall, short classes were held to organize the classes for the second semester.

List of Pennsylvania Lawyers.

Fred J. Fees, one of the best basketball players who ever attended Georgetown, and star shortstop on the nine for the last four years, was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar, last week, at Ebensburg, Pa. Freddie graduated from the Law School in 1919, and got his L. L. B. last year. He is now a full-dutied attorney-at-law in Carrolltown, Pa.

Another Georgetown man, James D. O'Connor, was admitted at the same time. The Philadelphia Record of January 24 contains this story:

"Ebensburg, Jan. 24-James Don O'Connor, of Johnstown, and Fred J. Fees, of Carrolltown, were admitted to the bar of Cambria county today, Judge M. B. Stephens presiding."

"Attorney O'Connor is the son of Mrs. Annie O'Connor, Stonycreek St., Johnstown, and of the late Attorney James B. O'Connor, and is a nephew of the late Judge Francis J. O'Connor. He is a graduate of the Johnstown High School. He was a law student at the University of Michigan and had just taken his A. B. degree when he entered the army. For some time he was stationed at Camp Len, Va., and Camp Sheridan, Ala. His course in law was completed at Georgetown University, regarded as one of the leading law schools in the country. Attorney O'Connor, it is understood, will practice his profession in Johnstown. Mrs. O'Connor witnessed her son's admission to the bar."

"Attorney Fees completed his preparatory course at St. Francis College, Lorette, and Juniata College, Huntingdon. He studied law at Georgetown University, and was a member of the graduating class of 1919. While at Georgetown he took an active part in athletics and played shortstop on the varsity baseball team, and was captain of the basketball team. He is the son of Adam Fees of Carrolltown.

"The young lawyers were admitted on motion of Attorney P. N. Shettig."

TOM POWERS CHEERING NEWS.

One of those cheering letters from New York alumni reached our office today. Plans are under way for a real old-time Georgetown Prom to be held at the Plaza Monday night. It is encouraging and inspiring to note how enthusiastically the Georgetown men of New York keep in touch with the old place alive. Men like Mr. J. Lynch Fendergast, the president, and the other officers of the society at New York, have never seemed too busy to help Georgetown in any and every way. Recently there has been created a Director of Athletics as their guest in order to learn in what way they could aid in assisting the teams of the University. They are setting an admirable example, these old grads of New York, and if Georgetown men throughout the country will follow their lead and that of the Boston branch, immeasurable good can be accomplished.

KEEP SENDING 'EM.

We heard the other day from Clyde Engle, the old Red Sox star, a high bit of praise for the 1921 baseball team. Engle, who has been making a great success of handling athletics for the University of Vermont, had been anxious to have Georgetown meet his team for a home game, but, because of a conflict of playing dates, this was impossible. In speaking of the pitching staff of Georgetown this year, the old big leaguer says: "To my mind, you have the greatest pitching staff in the history of college baseball." Made us quite puffed up, these words, coming as they did from a man who certainly knows whereof he speaks. He, himself, has no weak aggregation of ball players, and it will be with respect for a generous and dangerous opponent that Georgetown meets Vermont during the Easter holidays.

JUST A HINT.

The old saying that a prophet is without honor among his own people, or words to that effect, holds good for him who would preach to those with whom he comes in contact day in and day out. We wouldn't change the happy, generous spirit of the way of the men of Georgetown if we could, but there is a dangerous spirit, especially in the college, of "taking things easy." Professors and others who have made a study of students will recognize the degree in which these expectations are not realistic and unrealistic and unrealistic. The arts and sciences, the financiers, the business men, the scientists who furnish the capital and the engineers who design the machines that allow those in charge to carry on their work to a successful conclusion. The men of these classes are the ones who derive the true education of college. They are not the ones who spend their idle hours in fanciful dreams, but once they dream they execute it, so that a happy inspired moment is often the cause of a great event. But, sad to say, we have often in addition to these many of the class who in every-day life simply slip along. There are many who only do what is necessary, who perhaps have ability, who dream great dreams, only to forget them when they are wakened by the cold reality of life. If they would follow these dreams out, if they only attempted something, great things might come of their ideas, or they might themselves become something merely for the trying. Many of us are too prone to bury our talents. No one is going to give the extraordinary pains to bring them out in us. If we wish to succeed we must first try to climb the hill of success alone. After we start ourselves others will help. Why do not more become prominent in school activities? Why do not others reach a higher level in outside affairs? The answer to both is the same. Mainly because they do not first attempt to reach those levels themselves. It is not foreverybody to lead, but at least every body may sensibly and constructively help and follow. GROVE.
How is a Wireless Message Received?

EVERY incandescent lamp has a filament. Mount a metal plate on a wire in the lamp near the filament. A current leaps the space between the filament and the plate when the filament glows.

Edison first observed this phenomenon in 1883. Hence it was called the "Edison effect."

Scientists long studied the "effect" but they could not explain it satisfactorily. Now, after years of experimenting with Crookes tubes, X-ray tubes and radium, it is known that the current that leaps across is a stream of "electrons"—exceedingly minute particles negatively charged with electricity.

These electrons play an important part in wireless communication. When a wire grid is interposed between the filament and the plate and charged positively, the plate is aided in drawing electrons across; but when the grid is charged negatively it drives back the electrons. A very small charge applied to the grid, as small as that received from a feeble wireless wave, is enough to vary the electron stream.

So the grid in the tube enables a faint wireless impulse to control the very much greater amount of energy in the flow of electrons, and so radio signals too weak to be perceived by other means become perceptible by the effects that they produce. Just as the movement of a throttle controls a great locomotive in motion, so a wireless wave, by means of the grid, affects the powerful electron stream.

All this followed from studying the mysterious "Edison effect"—a purely scientific discovery.

No one can foresee what results will follow from research in pure science. Sooner or later the world must benefit practically from the discovery of new facts.

For this reason the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company are concerned as much with investigations in pure science as they are with the improvement of industrial processes and products. They, too, have studied the "Edison effect" scientifically. The result has been a new form of electron tube, known as the "pliotron", a type of X-ray tube free from the vagaries of the old tube; and the "kenntron", which is called by electrical engineers a "rectifier" because it has the property of changing an alternating into a direct current.

All these improvements followed because the Research Laboratories try to discover the "how" of things. Pure science always justifies itself.
G. U. RIFLE TEAM LOSES TO DREXEL

Georgetown Team Defeated In Second Match By Eight-Point Margin.

Georgetown's rifle team lost its second match, to Drexel Institute of Philadelphia last week, 479 to 471. Drexel's men were all well bunched, four of them shooting 96, while Georgetown was lower on the average. A 99 shot by Joseph A. McDonough, '22, lifted the total, but Drexel stayed on top by eight points. Drexel used the Savage .32 caliber long rifle piece, and seemed to get consistent results. Some of the Georgetown team used the regular Winchester 22 gallery rifle, but McDonough got his record score with the Winchester bolt action .22 rifle, borrowed for the match from Colonel Stoddard, director of civilian marksmanship. The National Rifle Association had ordered several of these rifles for the club, but they failed to arrive on time for the match, and as there was no opportunity for the entire team to practice with the loaned rifle, most of them did not take the chance of losing points with the strange piece.

Major Hobson is pushing his campaign to get the rifle team recognized as part of the Athletic Association, and to have minor letters awarded to members of the team. While the A. A. has not taken any stand on this matter yet, it is hoped that Major Hobson's efforts will be rewarded. In connection with this matter he has written to numerous colleges and universities in the east asking whether they gave letters or recognized the rifle teams. So far he has heard from Georgia Tech, Yale, Syracuse, Cornell, Navy, Colgate, Harvard, Drexel Institute, Columbia, Penn State, and several others. All of these institutions have the rifle section included in their athletic associations, and all give minor letters, while several give major letters in event of an intercollegiate championship.

Major Hobson announced last week that he has a big sporting carbine to be given as a prize for marksmanship. He has decided to give it to the man who has the highest score in the ten-weeks' match of the National Rifle Association, which started February 1. The rifle is a Spanish-made model of the famous old Krag service piece, bolt action, and of proven excellence.

The Brooklyn team rushed Georgetown off its feet for the next four minutes and in quick succession, as a result of brilliant team-play, scored six points. Swift and Ratner got the ball more than half way down the court. Flavin put in two foul shots, but Nelson brought Poly's count up to 29 on two more clean shots. Zazalli and Florence went back into the game for the last four minutes, and held the Brooklyn aggregation in check. Florence put a pretty one-hand toss into the net from the side, and just before the final whistle registered another tally in front of the basket.
