Subject Invitation to apply--FJC Seminar for Judges on International Law and Litigation

To: All U.S. Court of Appeals Judges
From: John S. Cooke, Director, Judicial Education Division

This announces an upcoming seminar on International Law and Litigation scheduled for November 14-15, 2003. This program is cosponsored by the Federal Judicial Center and the New York University School of Law. Topics will include threshold barriers to litigation, issues of extraterritorial application of U.S. law, considerations of intersystem comity, private international law in U.S. courts, and the Alien Tort Claims Act (& Torture Victim Prevention Act).

The program will begin on Friday morning and conclude early on Saturday afternoon. You can apply for this program directly on the Center's DCN site by clicking here . If you would prefer to download an application form, Click here. If you have difficulty with these links, contact [REDACTED] in the Judicial Education Division: tel. [REDACTED], [REDACTED]. Please note the application deadline is June 27, 2003.

Please apply for the program only if you are able to participate in all program sessions. In the event that the seminar is oversubscribed, geographic diversity and attendance at past seminars will be considered.

Applications will be reviewed immediately following the June 27 deadline; judges will be promptly notified of their acceptance or waiting list status. Please feel free to call me at [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] if you have questions about the program.

The Center is not sending this notice by U.S. mail. This electronic notification is the only notification you will receive, unless you specifically request another delivery.
