“Y” Opens, Village “A” Delayed

Construction Difficulties Blamed

by Val Reeves

None of the 330 students studied in the locked dormitories and the 90 students who lived in apartments were able to do so, as construction of the residence halls continued.

Tentative opening dates are set for September 21 for St. Ann. The funds loaned to Nevils into the形上 county complex are over a week behind schedule, said the Rev. Donald F. Miller. A loan from the United States government that will be in the form of a federal grant is also under review, a university official said.

The Student Life Planning and Physical Plant William E. Marini, who oversees the students, reported that the project is on schedule, despite the weather delays. Marini said that he is especially interested in the heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC) systems, which are being installed in the student dormitories. He said that the HVAC systems are critical to the comfort of the students.

The student dormitories will be completed in time for the fall semester, according to Marini. He said that the delay in the construction of the dormitories is due to the weather, which has caused delays in the installation of the HVAC systems.

However, Marini said that the university is confident that the dormitories will be ready for the fall semester.

HUD Funds Loan for Nevils

by Elvis Quinn

Georgetown University has received a $3.7 million HUD loan for the renovation and transformation of the Nevils building into student housing.

According to University Architect Dean D. D. Macri, the funds will be used for the purchase of the building and the renovation of the interior. The building will be transformed into student housing, with the addition of new features and amenities.

The project is in its final stages of design, which will allow for the renovation to begin immediately. The renovation will include the addition of new features, such as additional living space and improved facilities.

Task Force to Scrutinize Security

A task force has been created to review the security policies and procedures of the university. The task force will be comprised of faculty, staff, and students, and will be chaired by President John J. DeGioia.

The task force will review the security policies and procedures of the university, including the security personnel, the security technology, and the security protocols.

In addition, the task force will review the security policies and procedures of the neighboring schools, including the Catholic University of America and George Washington University.

Hoya Awards

A "professional package" was presented to the National Scholastic Press Association (NPSA) to promote the All-American Journalism Awards program. The NPSA is a non-profit organization that recognizes outstanding student journalists.

The "professional package" includes a T-shirt, a mug, and aUSB flash drive, all of which are designed to promote the All-American Journalism Awards program.

John J. DeGioia, president of George Washington University, said that the "professional package" is a great way to promote the All-American Journalism Awards program.

"The "professional package" is a great way to promote the All-American Journalism Awards program," DeGioia said. "It will be a big help to the student journalists who are working on their stories and submitting their entries."
By Georgetown University Community Action Coalition. She replaces Fay, who has returned to the University of Washington to continue her studies.

Fay said that the office is primarily responsible for providing the promotion of social action on the Georgetown campus. "I intend to evaluate what skills and motivations Georgetown students have, and match them to structured social action programs in the D.C. community," Fay stated. (The Community Action Coalition sponsors a wide variety of programs both in scope and in the nature of our participants. We offer programs associated with legal services to persons in need, community organizing, campus organizing, community organizing with minority children, work in local public schools in a variety of capacities, health and nutrition and arts programs. We also have begun working on a great deal with the Hispanic community. We are also very much concerned with housing issues and women's issues."

One of our newest programs involves energy education and research, and we are currently involved with Philips (Public Interest Research Group) in doing research on energy issues and in doing presentations to return citizens to the community.

An important thing about work in social action projects is that it always stays with you, even if you go on to a doctor of law, your perspective will be enhanced by the social action experience."

Fay stated that she has received many of her ideas concerning social action from actually working in the Student Volunteer Corps (S.V.C.) where she was involved in many of the major, social and political movements in the country. Fay was a member of the Student Government Association and was an active member of the Student Senate, a position in which she was involved in many of the major policy issues of the Student Government. Residence Life Pressed to Return Interest on Deposits

Ozmun commented, however, "This should be up to the task force to decide, not Mike." He explained some are interested, and should be investigated together.

Vice President Hughes said the first task of the committee would be to "build a record of information." Hughes said the committee would then decide whether to proceed on a college-wide or a student community level.

The committee will hold an open meeting where students can voice their concerns.

In October, 1978, the Housing Code was amended to state that students who paid interest on their security deposits must receive it back, but in the same month a non-security deposit law was passed and Ozmun also pointed out that the same was true for security deposits paid by students who lived in university-owned housing. He said the university would now have to investigate every case of security deposit withdrawal in order to determine whether the student was eligible for a refund.

Progress Report

The University, since last semester, has accomplished a lot in improving the quality of student life, but in some respects a lot remains to be done. On the positive side we have the opening of the new athletic complex and the relocation of the Student Health from McDonough Gymnasium to the basement of St. Mary's. The athletic department should be congratulated on its efforts to open the Yates Place as soon as possible and for being willing to institute expanded hours on an experimental basis.

The relocation of Student Health had been under discussion for a long time. A new location will offer greater privacy for patients and easier access to hospital facilities. Special credit for making this project a reality must be given to Student Government President Tracey Hughes, who so far has proven to be an effective student representative.

The security task force chaired by Wails is progressing slowly, partly because of the participants' desire to conduct a careful well-planned investigation, but also partly because of administration's desire to give the investigation an impartial character. He should also allow the task force to expand its investigation to the uniformed guards.

After last year's events, which included the arrest of an officer for auto sexual, discrimination complaints by ex-employees and union demands for better rights for the guards—Gu Promotions Services could start a little scrutiny closer to home.

The security task force will afford greater privacy for patients and making their stay off campus more palatable by charging reduced room fees.

Still needing attention, however, are two security-related items. As a result of Mr. Athletic Director Frank Risley, Chairman of the Protective Services Committee Michael Walls pointed out that the placement of a lighted sign which directs the lower main campus with the rec plaza.

Student residents expressed concern that they shared this concern, but his letter did not indicate that any positive action was being taken, such as discussions between himself and Security Director Charles Lamb.

Some of the raw text is not clearly legible due to the quality of the image. The text appears to be discussing the importance of evaluating beliefs, keeping off of oneself, and the importance of diverse viewpoints within a university setting. The text also mentions a university's influence on an individual's identity and the importance of self-expression. The University of Georgetown is mentioned as being a place where diverse viewpoints are encouraged, and the importance of maintaining one's identity is highlighted. The text suggests that a university can be a place where an individual can adapt to uncomfortable feelings and develop a sense of self-awareness. The text also implies that a university should provide opportunities for students to explore and express themselves freely.

The Sneeze

If you’ve got no too water hallows out of dormitory windows, many your target isn’t the director of GU Protection Services. The new high school senior participating in the University’s summer dormitories program, marked the hard way when they filled a pond of water in the School’s Pool: Long Tombs, by a student who was visiting the west campus this summer. The hallows narrowly missed their mark.

Informed sources report that in the student's work, researchers have found a way to make the pond water less dense. They have, in fact, made the pond water dense enough to cause the Hallows to sink. The Hallows is now being converted to a pond, which will be used as a swimming pool.

President for Academic Affairs

Pat Lines, the student’s roommate, is looking for volunteers to help with the conversion of the Hallows to a pond. If you are interested, please contact Pat Lines.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Heavy handed Coordinator Pat Metallid is a bit of redacting during the summer by having the rustic weekday blocks in the program even patterned a goods, fluorecence water-soluble green. Better speak up the next time you’re down there or you won’t be able to have yourself for the future.

For their tackness, the only thing that might possibly compare with the bugs are the dogs. What’s more, we’re all looking into the uncultivated lawn with life engine orange astro turf.

President Healy, be lazy, dreams and others the Villa projects each day where he keeps his health and that of the school’s students. They have been finding ways to increase the Villa’s student population, and one of their latest ideas is to make the Villa more accessible to students.

It sounds like some sort of discount drug store with wicks of shampoo, soap, and toothpaste. The Villa’s students can purchase these items from the Villa’s store and then use them to make their own personal hygiene products.

AdvicetoFrosh: Things Not To Do At Georgetown

By Edmond O'Neill

The following is a collection of advice from the Alumni Association, the National Student Council, the Students' Association, and various other appropriate organizations who have asked the author to write them. The following is not to be considered official advice, but rather a collection of advice that we hope will help you get through your first year at Georgetown University.

1. Avoid working.
2. Do not give a football player your car keys.
3. Avoid working the dish room.
4. Do not do track meets. If you do, do not drink.
5. Do not do anything illegal, immoral, or foolish, unless you are sure that John Carroll is right, or that there isn't anybody watching.
7. Do not buy a subscription to the magazine, that earthy, poetic name.
8. Avoid riding bicycles up cobblestoned hills.
10. Avoid admitting that you are from New Jersey.
11. Avoid certain Chemistry profs. (Who are you talking about?)
12. Do not attempt to speak legally.
13. Do not pretend to understand the instructions.
14. Do not allow Tuba Quartets to play music.
15. Do not let your roommate watch the football game at the formal dinner.
16. Avoid drinking any illegal, immoral, or foolish, unless you are sure that John Carroll is right, or that there isn't anybody watching.
17. Do not put toothpaste on the toothbrushes.
18. Do not do anything illegal, immoral, or foolish, unless you are sure that John Carroll is right, or that there isn't anybody watching.
19. Do not do track meets. If you do, do not drink.

NolteShinesInNo.DallasForty

Perhaps the best novel ever written about professional sports is Frank Clark's No. Dallas Forty. In a search- ing confrontation of the world of professional football, Gent attempts to show the violence of pro football as a microcosm of violence in the rest of society. In the film version, directed by Tom Kavanagh (film with Chad and Jane and Mike Kelliney the great Chief), Nolte shines as the star quarterback. Nolte is a virtual clone of the man in the book, and so he never loses his position as the team's star. Charges are trumped just a ploy to get him to throw the ball instead of the ball. The football player John Matuszak does well as two-pronged athlete. The role is turned in model-turned-actor Daysy Kelliney, who plays Nolte's girlfriend, Charlotte. Playing the part of an exotically blonde, Nolte fits the role of the blonde beauty that is the star of the show. The rest of the cast is made up of familiar football players. The highlight of this movie is the meatball scene, where Nolte is on his last legs, required to breathe through his nose, and he must come to terms with his past in order to be able to play. Why, then, does he keep on losing? Because he looses to the ball—invaluable tips that he hopes that his team will get behind so that the coach will put him into play. Elliott, a free spirit in a professional football. Gent attempts to mimic Tom Landry, the coach, in that he does not attempt to do the free-for-all. The difference is that his role could have easily degenerated to something like the free-for-all. Dick is incredibly blatant with his words. Elliott is flawless, showing the pain and the suffering, but also the true talent. The Eyes of Nolte's best scenes occurs when he tries to help an injured player. His coach shrieks at him for such an action and the suffering. But there are replacements. America's 1950s and 1960s football movie is upbeat, so they decide to stage a thirty day battle. But for the rest of the movie, only slightly funny, praises the coarse film that it is in. The mid-лет notes more than a 15 minute short features called DuckDuck which precedes it, then during the break and closed film. This film probably is for low level Lover and Schofield.

The anniversary Haunts. The supposed true story of a haunted house on Long Island, just one house next to another with blocks of toxic black paint, shadows and shadows, it seems like a lot of stories that are included in this movie. The movie is an example of a movie that can be enjoyed by anyone regardless of whether or not they are football fans. --Bill Henry

SEC Uncover Film Schedule

One of the chief forms of entertainment here at Georgetown is the film series sponsored by the Department of Drama. A student production, the SEC Uncover schedule features four films each week in the medical building. The films are generally a collection of films that are either recent or classic. This year the sampling is one of the best that is in the recent past, including several films that are the result of the SEC Uncover schedule. The series is a horror classic which has more money than any film other than Star Wars. The schedule ends with Chico Everse of the Third World, which was released in 1978. Also this year there are two films by Woody Allen. Midnight, Egoists, and The Eve of Long Beach. The film that was selected is a suspense film which was virtually ignored when it was released. The schedule is as follows: Chico Everse, Midnight, Egoists, and The Eve of Long Beach.

Offense is the key for Georgetown in 1979, according to Coach Glacken. Concerned by heavy losses due to graduation, the Hoyas are likely to take on an offensive approach.

Bill Ground

The side seaward and right end positions are held by seniors and juniors. Junior Ken Vogel and Marcie Walker at the line will be played by Bill Ground and Greg Miller, respectively. The Hoyas will open with a win over Fordham University on September 29. The defense, anchored by junior Mark Granville-Smith and senior John Shepp, will supply needed leadership to the team.

Barry Scott

Barry Scott, a senior quarterback, led Dunbar High School to the state championship in 1978. He is expected to be the starting quarterback for the Hoyas this year.

Georgetown is one of several East Coast basketball teams that are set to open the season this weekend. The Hoyas are scheduled to play against George Washington University and Bucknell University.

Coach Thompson said, "The Hoyas are ready to go and will be competitive in each game. We are looking forward to a strong season."
