DC Police Ask GU Help To Track Parking Fines

by Jimmy Ochs

The head of the District of Columbia Department of Motor Vehicles has sent a letter to the Georgetown Administration asking it to help them track down student parking violators.

According to Motor Vehicle head George A. England, the District police are having difficulty getting violators’ names from the license plates on out-of-state cars. Students are permitted to drive their cars in Washington without registering for District plates.

Under the new proposal, the police force would send lists of license plate numbers to the University.

The University would cross-check these lists with their own lists of registered student vehicles. The University would then notify the police of the students’ names.

England’s letter, which was sent to other area universities, reached Georgetown in September and was turned over to SPO Director Anthony Zeita, S.J., who has initiated two plans to decide if Georgetown should comply with the request.

He has sent copies of the letter to the three student councils asking for their opinions on the matter.

He has also asked University lawyers to determine whether Georgetown has a legal right to disclose information about students to the police.

Fr. Zeita says that until he receives a legal answer and also an indication of student feeling on the issue, he will take no further action.

Englestad at the time of announcing the letters that University compliance with the regulation was “optional.” However, he said he thought the universities would cooperate. Police Captain Garland Waters told The Washington Star that 70 percent of out-of-state cars parking in violation in the District were student owned.

The Nursing School Student Council has approved Mr. England’s request. The East Campus Student Council has taken the matter under investigation.

Tweed President Mike Brennan explained the students’ position on this issue at last Sunday’s Student Council meeting. Brennan told the members of the council that he and East Campus Student Council President Kevin McKenna would have no objection if the University gave students’ names to the police. Brennan went on to say, however, that he feels that if the University were to give students’ addresses to the police, it would constitute an invasion of privacy. This, according to Brennan, is directly contradictory to the University’s newly stated policy of confidentiality.

G.U. Sale Of Halcyon House Caused By Zoning Problems

by Glenn Weltand

University officials have announced the sale of Halcyon House, part of G.U.’s property since 1961. The structure, located at the corner of 34th and Prospect Sts. N.W., was built in 1873 by Benjamin Stoddert, who later became the first Secretary of the Navy.

Since its purchase by the University for the sum of $150,000, the house has been a source of much speculation and a fair amount of trouble. Georgetown originally planned to utilize Halcyon House as a women’s residence, which it did for one year— until June of 1962—before zoning prohibitions restricted its use to private rented apartments. The University rented it out as such until the sale (Sept. 29). The problem arose when it was found that the area of Georgetown in which the house is located is all zoned for single family housing units only. Even the conversion of private rented apartments still entailed the addition of a non-conforming zoning ordinance.

The official University statement concerning the sale is, in the words of George Roper, assistant vice-president for property management, that, “It was sold to an undisclosed buyer for an undisclosed amount.” However, an article in The Washington Post last week showed that the sale of a house, vacant until last March which Edmond W. Dreyfus in the amount of $257,000. The story, by NamekPhoton, indicated that no other income except for the sale had been received. The House is in the area of Georgetown which Dreyfus indicated that there are no other names except for the above. The Board of Directors declined to either confirm or deny the story. The group’s plans for the house were also undisclosed.

Recruiting Program Experiences Difficulty

by Joe Collins

A growing problem of lack of communication has arisen over the High School Recruiting Program. Beginning three years ago to compete with other colleges and universities in an attempt to gain the top candidates from high schools for the incoming freshman class. The most serious difficulty is in lack of cooperation of groups that have contact with prospective freshmen. Besides the Recruiting Committee, the Office of Admissions, the Office of Development and Public Relations and the alumni communicate in some way with the freshmen candidates.

Piers O’Donnell, co-chairman of this year’s committee along with William Knauf, remarked that he had faced much difficulty in recruiting with Father Joseph F. Sweeney, S.J., Director of Admissions, and other officials in attempting to get the program under way. No representatives of the admissions office was in attendance at the preliminary meeting.

The joint recruiting venture will include “the sponsoring of over a dozen weekends, several Christmas receptions (in the major cities), a letter writing campaign to applicants and a program of returning home early before Christmas vacation for personal contact with the candidates,” O’Donnell said in a letter to the freshman class.

“The growth and excellence of any school naturally depends upon the caliber of the students,” Father Rodney D. Davis, Dean of the College, said. “An intellectually oriented entering class presents a challenge to the course structures and professors of any university.”

The Office of Admissions advanced the deadline for applications for the Class of 1971 to Jan. 15. The department operates on a theory of allowing standards to be dictated only after all applications are received.

Last year this policy, with the deadline (Mar. 1) forced certain students to forfeit deposits at other universities if they wished to attend Georgetown. Many present freshmen did not hear from the Admissions Board until after Easter. Some schools demand deposits before that time, such as Boston College which requires a $100 earnest payment three weeks after acceptance. This usually comes well before Easter.

Thaddeus Stroebach of the Admissions Office expressed hope for better coordination in admissions procedures between his office and the Development Office. He cited one case of an applicant who had been "flatly refused entrance by our office and was then informed by Development that summer school might qualify him for admission." The student has a "trouble with the Fresh viewpoint and... (Continued on Page 10)
Frosh Vote In Serbe; E.C. Plans Discussed

By Ricky Enz

While they're still busy thanking their campaign officers and committing campus freshman class officers pursuing the business of unifying a class and organizing their share of Georgetown's student government.

Three of the successful candidates, Steve Serbe, president, Vice-President Emmet Cosgrove and Treasurer Bill Price, are students in the School of Foreign Service, while Eileen Wolf is an Institute French major.

President Steve Serbe considers the pledged support of his campaign opponents Peter Cutler and Pat Smith as a valuable first step towards unification.

Serbe, from Short Hills, N.J., campaigned with a four-point platform. A president's council consisting of representatives from each freshman dorm area is Serbe's primary proposal. At present, East Campus freshmen are meeting in McDonough, McGuire, and Ryan have no representation in the Walsh Area. Serbe hopes to remedy the situation via this council.

Serbe also advocates open class meetings in the face of controversy or important issues to "keep away from a four-man structure."

Compilation of a list of upper-classmen willing to tutor freshmen women are also prominent points of the president's platform.

The voting ended the week-long campaign with 29 candidates running for five class offices.

The College class of 1970 held their freshmen class elections last Friday and gave a landslide victory to Brian Phelan in the presidential race. "He is in the Walsh Area," Serbe, whose home is in Haddonfield, N.J., based her campaign with a four-point platform. Glee Club Members Petition Hume; Request Lighter Program Selection

By Lea Mannich

A group of 20 members of the Georgetown Glee Club attempted to "lighten" their music program this year in an open confrontation with Paul Hume, director of the Glee Club. Bill Sutherby, a member of the organization, presented Glee Club President Tony Tremblay with a petition signed by 20 of the members, which sought an improvement of the Glee Club's "image" on campus.

The petition argued that the Glee Club's image was declining, and that this was due primarily to the organization's overemphasis on religious and serious music. Bill Sutherby claimed that last year the Glee Club's program consisted of 70 percent religious-serious music. In addition, he said that the other 30 percent was not the best secular-light music available. Sutherby contended that the Glee Club's program was not appealing to the majority of the audiences. He appealed for a 50-50 ratio in serious to light music.

Mr. Hume devoted a full hour-and-a-half practice session to discussion of the problem. The director, who is music critic for The Washington Post, argued that historically speaking the Glee Club has sung more than 30 percent light music in its programs — although he admitted that in the last two years the Glee Club has had an unusually "heavy" program. Mr. Hume said that the reason the Glee Club has been devoting so much time to religious music is that its two concerts this fall will be held in chapels. The Glee Club will sing a joint concert at Sweet Briar College in Virginia, in their non-denominational chapel Nov. 20, and in December the club will sing a Christmas concert at Trinity College in Holy Trinity Church on 36th Street.

In December and January, however, Mr. Hume said the music practiced by the Glee Club would be considerably lighter. The club will be making a four-day Midwest trip to Detroit, Milwaukee and Minneapolis-St. Paul, at semester break. Mr. Hume warned the club that they should not expect "light" concerts on the Midwest trip, however. St. Catharine's College in St. Paul has requested that the Georgetown Glee Club prepare the half-hour-long Faure Requiem to be sung with the girl's choir.

Mr. Hume, pointing to the light side, argued that the Glee Club would be preparing three show tunes for the Midwest trip — "Nothing Like a Dame," "Simple Little System" and "The Oldest Established Permanent Floating Cup Game in New York." Also, the Glee Club will sing a new Citizens Committee Protests G.U. Expansion Into Residential Area

by Ricky Enz

A subgroup within the George­town Citizens Committee has been formed to prevent further expan­sion of the University in the Georgetown area.

The group, which has incor­porated, proposes to achieve its objective by buying property in various blocks of land, in an effort to prevent GU from obtaining the large tracts of land necessary for University building programs. The controversy may have stemmed back to a 1947 meeting of the Georgetown Citizens Committee with Father Philip Gibbons. At this meeting the University agreed to remodel as residential buildings a house it owned in the Georgetown area, which was, at the time, a slum.

According to a Citizens Com­mittee spokesman, a map, identifi­cating Georgetown areas by square and lot, was drawn up in consequence of the zoning meeting. This map designated residential and business zones, and, according to the spokesman, N., O., P., 35th and 36th Streets were specified as resi­dential areas.

The University officials have “gone back on their word” and are trying to convert houses in this residential area to office buildings. As a result, property valued at $1,700,000 is now tax exempt by cause, under law, University office buildings, regardless of remodeling as dwellings, are considered “tax exempt.”

Citizens in the group are annoyed and declare that the University has “tried to put up a facade.” They feel the University violates property from people in “economic distress” such as recent widows and divorcees.

As a result of these grievances, groups within the Georgetown Citizens Committee are “putting up the money” to fight Georgetown Uni­versity. They feel that the University cannot get property under eminent domain. This is being done, according to a spokesman, “by keeping a very vigorous and alert vigil” as to the real estate tactics being employed by George­town.

Student government, it seems to me, always runs the risk of turning into “busy work” enter­prises that keep students out of mischief and allow them to blow off steam harmlessly. It needn’t end up thus, but often enough I suspect it does. And this may be the reason why the more mature and intelligent student becomes disenchanted with it, and why it attracts the well-known type, the campus politician. Not only as a counter-balance to this tendency, but also as a contribution to the entire university community, student government ought in some way to be meshed in with other student units. After all, at least, with the Faculty Senate. I am not, of course, suggesting that student government’s concern for proper student issues be abandoned. Rather, I am claiming, and evidence from other campuses supports the claim, that elected student representatives can, along with governing themselves, make a significant contribution to the university’s government. Apart from the long range benefits of this new role for student government, I can think of an immediate one. Some student petulance might vanish in the eye-opening experience of sharing the agonies of running a large private university.

Pro Football, Con The Big Bomb

There are two kinds of bombs that come to mind in reference to football at Georgetown. The first is, of course, the long bomb, a weapon our three-quarters had little need to employ last Saturday, since the Hoyas’ ground game consistently penetrated CU’s porous line and invisible secondary. The second is the big bomb, a famous Georgetown custom. Any outdoor sports event can present an unique opportunity to practice this.

The big bomb found some amount of advo­cation at Brookland “Stadium.” That is because a good number of us consider things like football games as primarily social events. Nonetheless, it is better the effort of having to trudge down­stairs and hurry back up after stumbling out of bed for an early class.

To Help Nourish The Physical Plant

With all due humility, and in the interests of insuring the further health and growth of our flourishing physical plant, The HOYA offers some preliminary suggestions for fur­ther campus improvements.

1) The conversion of the John Carroll statue into a talking robot, on the order of the World’s Fair Abe Lincoln. Upon the en­trance of any important dignitary, this statue, by the manipulation of the proper buttons, will be able to rise, bow grandiosely, remove the charter from the pot under his seat, and read it.

The Case vs. Refrigerators

Informed sources report that Father An­thony J. Zeits, SPO Director, will indeed enforce this rule, though, in time, there may be increased pressure from students for a larger schedule next year.

A spirited, small-time team, playing a medium-sized schedule could be an inestim­able asset for Georgetown University. Just enough, perhaps, to keep the students inter­ested and active, and to keep alumni away. It would not be feasible to suggest such a program, however, unless regular fan sup­port could be assured: support, that is, di­rected to football as a sport, and not to foot­ball as the featured entertainment for an afternoon of psycho-expansion.

The CU game had other strikes against it. Since last Tuesday was a free day, it fell in the midst of what could easily be converted into a four-day weekend and an escape from school. Its change from scrimmage to formal scrimmage to game status occurred at such time that it left little possibility for sufficient publicity. Nonetheless, it was ready for it; and it is, after all, the team that is the essence of any football game.

Yard President Michael Brennan reported before the Student Council meeting Sunday night the latest developments over the issue of re­frigerators in dormitory rooms.

THEOLOGY
To the Editor:
All sins student voices make demands, and controversies emerge from these demands. But, in most cases, the demands are beside the point, and the controversies rage over irrelevancies.

This will undoubtedly be true of the recent student demand that required theology courses be reduced to electives. If this is done, it is clear that very few students will elect them. As will those students then be better off or better educated? I doubt it.

Theology should be the most exciting and relevant subject on the campus. It is not now and has not been for decades. This is clear from many years of student complaints aimed at the required theology courses (and, to a somewhat lesser degree, at the required philosophy courses). These courses have had bad courses, misconceived and badly taught, despite the fact that they have, in many at least, been concerned with the most important subject in the curriculum, a subject which the student will get nowhere else, if he is not to fall behind his contemporaries. The content is, intrinsically, the most interesting and most exciting one there is.

Instead of demanding that theology be made elective, so that they may avoid taking them, students should have been demanding, for the last generation or more, that the theology courses be improved. Instead, they now demand that they be made elective, obviously a step toward their large-scaled neglect (like ancient Greek). This would be one more episode in the rash of drop-out action in this country to ape the secularized universities, without any real consideration of the question if the secular university professors are good or bad, in terms of Catholic education.

Catholic education in this country has a great opportunity to do a job which badly needs to be done and which more, the theology courses be made elective, so that students may avoid taking them, that they may be better educated, that the theology courses be improved. Instead, they now demand that they be made elective, obviously a step toward their large-scaled neglect (like ancient Greek). This would be one more episode in the rash of drop-out action in this country to ape the secularized universities, without any real consideration of the question if the secular university professors are good or bad, in terms of Catholic education.

Catholic education in this country has a great opportunity to do a job which badly needs to be done and which, more than others, should be able to do. I mean to say that young people should be acquainted with the traditions of Christian culture, and in these traditions, a major place should be reserved for theology. I do not say that young people should be indoctrinated, either with the traditions of Christian culture or with the theological discoveries of those traditions. They should have the opportunity to become acquainted with them. Catholic education has failed miserably in providing this opportunity; just as the secular universities have failed, in a different way. It is no solution to the problem that Catholic institutions have, in response to student protests at their failure to do this task in an acceptable way, rush forward the path toward meaninglessness eclecticism from which the secular universities are, even now, receding.

Some years ago, the alumni of twelve successive classes of the Foreign Service School (1949-1960) were sent questionnaires regarding their undergraduate courses. The most notable feature of their replies was the concensus of adverse criticism of the courses in theology. At the time, I felt deep sorrow at this tragic failure of a great educational opportunity. I feel the same sorrow now at the present student demands that these courses be made elective. Are there no leaders, either among the students or elsewhere, who will direct these demands in the correct direction, namely that way as its importance requires?

FALSE PHIZ
To the Editor:
Does one remember Steve Allen’s great comedy act—the "angry-let­ter" routine? Well, here is one from an irate reader.
I am sick and tired of seeing, when I open the pages of The HOYA, the same grim, long-­awed phrase "Spiritual Attendance". Week after week there it is—blighting the otherwise distinguished journal. I can’t stand it any more, If he isn’t banished once and for all from our pages, for I one will cancel my subscription!

CHURCH LINE
To the Editor:
Certainly the controversy which surrounded the lamentable student non-attendance at the Mass of the Holy Spirit was worthy of extensive coverage and editorial comment in The HOYA. Equally unfortunate, however, is the case where students do attend a Mass only to be subjected to the political tirades of the celebrant in his sermon. Such was the case at the 12 o’clock Mass in Dahlgren Chapel on Sunday, October 30. The celebrant was the Reverend Richard T. McSorley, S.J.

Under the auspices of the pulpit and of the Catholic Church, Fr. McSorley went beyond the mere expression of political opinion. He should recognize the ambiguity of his position—Was he preaching the "Church line," or was it his own curious political meanderings? Although we found the nature of Fr. McSorley’s polemics appalling, it was not a political disagreement that forced us to leave the Mass during his sermon. It was, how­ever, his use of the pulpit for his brand of indoctrination.

RE McCUTCHEY
To the Editor:
Just who is J. D. McCutchey? Just what is the story behind his column? He is the angriest, most self-righteous "columnist" I’ve ever read! He has absolutely no imagination! The Beatles, Turry Southern, Picasso, and James Bond are putting us on; success, in the case of the Singing Nun, Fromm, etc., tends to change people; PLAYBOY has a breed fixation and is really not as with it as it would like you to believe. We’ve all heard this stuff before, you name Wald and his "I’m not a political issue" crap, the same old stuff, stuff, stuff, stuff...J. D. H! He probably belongs to the QUESTION MARK, and the MYSTERIANS fan club. Vic Revere '68

Moreover, when this Halabi character was sports editor of The HOYA, he had the effrontery to write a sports column that was actually worth reading. Fortunately, this situation has been corrected. BLACK POWER
To the Editor:
By way of a preface, this letter is written in response to the article concerning "Black Power" phenomenon that appeared in the September 22, 1966 issue ofニューズレビュー. It is hoped that the editors may be able to publish this letter, that it may be read by more than the usual number of people.

Any human being aware (and it is our business to be aware) of the plight of the poor Negro in the ghetto must sympathize (em­pathy being an impossibility for the non-ghetto dweller regardless of his sensitivity). Yet, in his frustration, his desper­ations, his anger, he is not sympathetic with the gross injustices (and right­ fully so). What he seeks is tangible, literal changes which touches him. Who are we to deny him that which we do not ourselves experience?

Frosh Debaters Win: Philodemicians Join TV Panel On U.N.

Georgetown's freshman debaters completely swept the field of the Wagner College Novice Debate Tournament last weekend. The two Gaston-White teams compiled a perfect 6-0 record to take first place overall, as well as all top individual honors. The team of Fischer and Liencres compiled the best affirmative with a 9-3 record. Fischer was the affirmative speaker and Liencres was second. The negative team of Austin and Hakala was also first and also had a 9-3 record. Austin was best negative speaker in the first game, and Hakala was second.

At Wake-Forest Novice Tournament Georgetown had an overall record of 8-4. The negative team of Thoms and Greenwald went 5-1, and qualified as second best negative team in the tournament. Their affirmative counterparts — Cowney and Getachter went 3-3. Thoms and Greenwald tied for the position of third best speaker in the tournament.

The Varsity did not fare as well as the freshmen debaters. John Koeltl and John Owen went 3-3 at a tournament held on the University of Kansas at Emporia. In addition to debating, four members of the Varsity team were also elected to be part in a panel discussion on the United Nations, forming a student affiliate of the University under the auspices of the University Forum television series. The half-hour panel segment will be part of a five series of five on the theme: The United Nations — Where Is It Going? Are We Headed Anyway? All the metropolitan area universities participating in the five programs, but the panels for the first four were professors or embassies personnel. Bob McKenna, John Koeltl and Bob Mannix represented Georgetown in the series; their topic was the United Nations and world opinion. Harvard Businessmen View Computerized Theatre Plans

by George Condon

Twenty-one members of the Harvard Business School Club of Washington, D.C. attended a dinner-disco — meeting last Thursday night, Oct. 27, in New South Faculty Lounge.

After the dinner, the club members listened to Prof. Thomas C. Raymond, a professor of Business Administration, in Harvard Business School. His 90 minutes stint climaxed the three-hour meeting which began at 6:30.

In conjunction with his topic, "The Businessmen and the Performing Arts," Prof. Raymond included a slide presentation of the experimental theater recently constructed for Harvard's literary course. The 75 slides showed different facets of the unique theater. It is completely run by a complex of computer techniques. The government would be forced to subsidize them.

He told the businessmen where they fit into the picture. Prof. Raymond suggested the possibility of forming business cooperative ventures to lead to better business techniques. The government would be forced to subsidize them.

Local Club president, Harvey Lampshire, cited a lack of public awareness of the absence of any members of the Georgetown student body at the meeting. In fact, the great majority of the students were not even aware of the dinner-disco meeting.

Please don't zlipf Sprite. It makes plenty of noise all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just can't get enough. Flip it's lid and it really flies. Bubbling, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place. An almost excessively lively drink. Hence, to zlipf it to err.

What is zlipfing? Zlipfing is in to drinking what smoking one's lips is to eating. It is the ecstatic burst you make when draining the last few calories of Sprite from the bottle with a smile.

Zzzzzzffffff!

It is completely scandal for it to be brought up in polite society. It never appeared on campus either.

But, if zlipfing Sprite is not absolutely essential to your existence so a good healthy zlipf is your idea of heaven, well, who am I to judge? But have a heart. A zlipf is simply a little zlipf goes a long, long way.

Sprite, so tart and tingly, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Gu Hospital Teams Develop Improved Heart Valve, Drugs

Patients near death because of extremely severe forms of high blood pressure can now be saved by a "crash program" of intensive drug treatment.

Georgetown University Medical Center researchers have developed the "crash program" which effectively lowered blood pressure and enabled patients to longer responded to the usual anti-hypertensive drugs.

Associated in the Georgetown study were Dr. Frank A. Finnerty, Jr., associate clinical professor of medicine; Dr. Nikos Kakaviatos and Dr. Michael Davidov, both research fellows at Georgetown.

The treatment devised by the Georgetown researchers involves hospitalizing the patients for 20 days and giving them daily injections of a special anti-hypertensive drug called diazoxide.

The injections are given as often as necessary to keep blood pressure down to a pre-determined level. Dr. Finnerty said he had the responses to injections is safe, swift and prolonged, providing many advantages over other therapies.

The procedure was tried on 16 patients whose blood pressure had remained high (a mean of 178) despite intensive therapy, the patients were fully aware of the treatment and the possible complications. Dr. Finnerty said that if this type of treatment was effective it would be able to lower blood pressure and enable patients to continue with their lives.

This is Russ Kennedy of Balboa Island, California, on an in-port field trip as a student aboard Chapman College's floating campus. For three weeks, 200 students, including this writer, have been able to attend classes and participate in activities of Chapman College, while the university continues making research trips around the world. The purpose of the trips is to encourage students to participate in the research being conducted by the college.

Rus transferred the 12 units earned during the study-travel semester at sea to his record at Chapman College, the university's floating campus. The transitions were made as part of a special anti-hypertensive drug called diazoxide.

Historian Washburn Attacks Unfair Treatment Of Indians
by Tom Nealon

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 26, at 8:00 P.M., in the New South Faculty Lounge, Dr. Wilkin Washburn, noted historian, addressed a group of students and faculty at a meeting of the History Club.

Dr. Washburn received his A.B. from Dartmouth in 1948, and his M.A. and doctorate in history from Harvard. He was a Reynolds Scholar, and presently is a member of the Smithsonian Institution staff.

Dr. Washburn’s work includes numerous writings on Indian-white relations, especially those of the Colonial Period. His book on the Bacon Rebellion is particularly significant. In this book he attacks the traditional view which portrays Bacon as a hero and Barclay as the reason for the trouble. He contends that Bacon should not be praised as much as he has been. He also tries to defend Governor Barclay and to point out the injustice of the court.

Dr. Washburn holds that the Indians have always been considered unfairly and attempts to substantiate his opinion.

Dr. Washburn stated that history has often been misinterpreted and distorted. He pointed to the Africa map as an example of the problem of historical accuracy. It is commonly accepted that the Norse preceded Columbus to America. Dr. Washburn contends that the Africa map is not authentic. He stresses the need for specific details, not general ones, when dealing with historical incidents.

Dr. Washburn concluded his lecture with a discussion of the Smithson-ian Institution’s new American Indian Studies Program, which he advocates. Through this program, the Smithsonian affords students interested in a particular field of study the opportunity to use their facilities and consult their staff. He also mentioned the need for specialized personnel in this area. He emphasized that there are numerous fields not yet explored, among them clothing and the postal service. Before concluding, he said that the Smithsonian Institution sponsors various graduate programs and offers scholarships to people interested in

House System Role; Stress On Individual
by Gene Payne

In order to “effectively dispel unfounded rumors and misconceptions that have shrouded the concept of a house system,” housemaster James J. Skeffington issued a statement to the residents of Harbin Hall entitled “The House System and the House Council in Harbin Hall.”

Skeffington explained the role of the house councils in the University and answered the questions of student leaders who challenged the house councils as organizations usurping student government power. He said that the house system “is intended to be separate, distinct, and independent of the organizational structure of student government.”

Skeffington envisions it as a “supplemental program” for the

Harvard Business School Visitor

Assistant Dean Woodford L. Flowers, Director of College Relations and a member of the Admissions Board of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, will visit Georgetown University on Friday, November 4, to talk to students interested in business as a career of excitement and creative opportunity.

Requirements for admission to the two-year course, leading to a degree of Master in Business Administration (MBA), include a college degree in any field of concentration, a standing in at least the top third of the class, and a record of progressive achievement in campus activities, business, the military, or elsewhere.

The MBA Program at the Harvard Business School is based on the experience-oriented case method, pioneered at the Harvard Business School, to develop the practical, analytical, and decision-making capacities that are key to managerial effectiveness.

For outstanding students in each first-year class (of roughly 500), there are 10 fellowships available. Approximately 10 per cent of the Harvard Business School students also make use of the Deferred Payment or Loan Program which enables all students admitted to the Harvard MBA Program to attend even though their sources of funds are limited.

Seniors, or others, wishing to talk to Mr. Flowers may make an appointment through the office of Dean Frank Evans.
AND HUSTON CREATED THE BIBLE

Dear Dr. Louis Dupré,

In my new book on religious spectacles, I am reviewing the film "The Bible" as directed by Henry Huston. I have not only seen the film, but it has become, in my opinion, a cornerstone of modern religious cinema. I feel that Dr. Dupré's review of the film is too critical and fails to appreciate the artistic merit of the film. I would like to offer a more positive perspective on the film, one that I believe captures its true essence.

Firstly, I would like to commend Henry Huston for his direction of the film. "The Bible" is a sprawling epic that covers the entire story of the Old Testament, from the creation of the world to the death of Jesus. Huston's vision is unflinching, and he does not shy away from the darker aspects of the story. He has created a film that is both visually stunning and intellectually challenging.

Secondly, I would like to applaud Huston's use of modern technology to bring the story to life. The film features state-of-the-art special effects that transport the audience to a world that is both familiar and otherworldly. The depiction of the Garden of Eden, the flood, and the construction of the ark are just a few examples of the film's use of technology to create a cinematic experience that is both thrilling and thought-provoking.

Finally, I would like to suggest that Huston's film is a valuable contribution to religious scholarship. The film provides a fresh interpretation of the biblical stories, one that is both true to the text and accessible to a modern audience. Huston's film is a work of art that is also a work of scholarship, and I believe that it will be an important addition to the field of religious studies for years to come.

I hope that this letter has provided a more positive perspective on "The Bible" and that it will encourage others to view the film with a more open mind. I would be interested in hearing your thoughts on the film and would welcome any feedback you may have.

Yours sincerely,

[Your Name]

George-town sold the property after the recent establishment of the official University boundaries by the National Capital Planning Commission. The boundaries as presently determined place Halcyon House at least two blocks outside the school's area of jurisdiction.

Historically, Halcyon House joins a colorful and somewhat unusual past. It remained as originally constructed until, early in this century, when it was purchased and remodeled by Albert Clements, a nephew of Samuel Clements, Mark Twain. Clemens literally made it a house within a house, building additions on all sides of the original Georgian structure and bringing the total number of rooms in Halcyon House to 46.

Clemens willed the house to Harvard University from whence ownership passed to a Mrs. H. E. Kon-drup and her daughter, Mrs. Kon-drup Gray. They also remodeled it, adding electricity and indoor plumbing. The former proprietor did not believe in electricity. It was from Mrs. Kondrup Gray that Georgetown purchased the property.

Several oddities besides the owner's aversion for electricity are also connected with the house. Mr.
Roper, who lives in Halcyon House, tells of the fact that at one time, earlier in the century the owners were unable to get colored servants to work in the house, who believed it to be haunted. Supposedly, the ghost is that of a British soldier who was wounded in the siege of Washington during the War of 1812 and died in the house.

Still other versions of the ghost them say that it is the spirit of Albert Clemens or Benjamin Sted-dert himself which is to blame for the mysterious opening and shut-ing of doors or strange clatterings in the upper stories—happenings which are attested to by several former and current occupants of the place. The March 1963 issue of Parade magazine featured an article entitled "I Live in a Haunted House," which was written by Mr.
Roper's son.

Other rumors, in addition to the preternatural and superstitious ones, persist concerning Halcyon House. One of the more popular ones, previous to the sale, was that Georgetown was planning to convert the house into an art museum.

"Such a plan was considered very briefly, but the exmence and red tape involved in remodeling, fire-proofing and, again, re-zoning, would make the project practically and financially unfeasable."

Recruiting

Apply NOW for a daily part-time or evening and Saturday Christmas position. A real opportunity to earn extra money with your spare time.
Immediate discount on your purchases, training with pay. Plan to come back late, enjoy a long weekend—without cutting classes.

Use your Eastern Youth ID Card, or another airline's version. If you don't have one —and you're under 22—you really ought to.

To get your Eastern Youth Fare Card, send a $3 check or money order, proof of age (copy of driver's license, birth certificate or passport) to Eastern Airlines, Department 350, 10 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y., N.Y. 10020

With your Youth ID Card, you can get an Eastern ticket for half fare. No advance reservations are permitted. But if there's a seat free at departure time, after passengers holding reservations and military personnel have been seated, you can fly to any Eastern city in the United States. And look down on all the drivers.
When it comes to politics, is big business a Mugwump?

Some sharp tongues define "mugwump" as a political animal with his "mug" on one side of the fence, his "wump" on the other. Clearer heads claim it a stamp of independence. The definition and corporate stance Western Electric takes is strictly nonpartisan.

But nonpartisan as WE must be, we recognize that, to be an effective citizen, the individual must become a political partisan. And we do our best to encourage his definition and corporate stance.

The Persistent Problem of Unemployment...The Negro’s Long Struggle...America’s Balance of Payments. Booklets are handed out that answer questions like: "How can I get started in politics? How can I use my talents to serve my party?"

Before elections, Back Your Party rallies are held. Bunting and posters hung. Politicians from both national parties are invited to speak. A dialogue develops. Thousands of WE people participate. It stirs up their political juices. Helps make them better informed, ergo: better citizens.

As a national company, in the Bell System to make ever-better communications equipment, we believe such basic communications are vital. It's also fun!

Watts or the Delta, Lowndes County or the North-East Section?

The tragedy of "Black Power" is not that it persecutes or repudiates the white liberal (who can no longer so conveniently look to the South), nor is it tragic because it has served as a rallying cry (or even battle call) for the black man-in-the-street (for this aspect is much more symptomatic than causative, though it does suggest the basic malady).

No matter what Mr. Carmichael's intent is, to the Negro, "Black Power" derives its magnetic appeal from its association with the slogan "Black Power." Surely the advocate of change in American society must deal solely with the realities of that society and as Mr. Carmichael states "color cannot be forgotten" until its weight is recognized and dealt with. Yet recognition and understanding of racism does not necessitate identification with racism. It is one thing to know racism as it is; it is another thing to work within the confines of the color barrier.

The reply may be made to my statement that there is no question of alternatives in this matter; that the only choice is between "Black Power" and change (revolutionary though it may be), or "incarnation" (in its most negative sense) and stagnation. I can offer but one response to this challenge: the aim of "Black Power" (which I take to be the involvement of all Negroes in the effort to win their rights) can be realized without the use of a racial appeal.

Fighting fire with fire may be a proverbial truism but in the case of Negro rights it is likely that before the fire burns out, it will weaken rather than . . . "Burn, Baby, Burn."

Launch an Exciting Career as an Intelligence Specialist

The Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) is a unique, independent organization serving diverse intelligence requirements of the defense. We are active in many areas directly or indirectly related to national security . . . probing not only purely military conditions, trends and forces, but also pertinent economic, social, cultural, physical, geographic and scientific factors.

Each year we seek out qualified individuals for DIA's entry level Career Development Plan. This is a program designed both to equip you for a responsible and challenging permanent career position, and enable you to complete most or all requirements for an advanced degree.

THREE-MONTH ORIENTATION COURSE

All college graduate recruits attend a three-month Intelligence Orientation Course. Its objectives are to orient the trainee to the Department of Defense generally and the Defense Intelligence Agency specifically, with particular emphasis on the role of the civilian analyst in the military intelligence community.

Following completion of this course, trainees are assigned to substantive areas of work related to their disciplines. At the beginning of the second year, you will be selected for a specific assignment leading to a position as permanent member of the work force.

OPPORTUNITY FOR ADVANCED STUDY

All trainees are eligible for educational programs leading to advanced degrees. These opportunities—plus many additional training opportunities—may be provided either during or after normal working hours (or both).

You will find that the advantages of a career at DIA are many and varied, including the liberal fringe benefits associated with Federal employment. Our locations (the Pentagon and nearby Arlington, Va.) and a wealth of recreational, cultural, historical and educational attractions are within a few minutes drive.

And by no means least, you will derive much satisfaction from contributing personally to the achievement of national objective.

CAMPUS INTERVIEWS SOON!

Visit your Placement Office Now . . . to arrange an interview with DIA representatives. If you wish, you may write DIA headquarters for additional information. Note: All applicants must be U.S. citizens, subject to thorough background inquiry and physical examination.
1966 Homecoming Queen Lineup

The 1966 Homecoming Queen will be chosen from among the seven candidates pictured at the right. The candidates represent Georgetown and the six women's colleges: Trinity, Dunbarton, Immaculata, Marymount, Mount Vernon, and Marjorie Webster.

Selection of the Queen will be by vote of the men of the undergraduate schools of the University. Polling places will be set up at the Stump, in New South Lobby, and in the Walsh Lobby. Voting will be held Monday through Friday of next week.

The Queen candidates will be presented on floats during the Homecoming parade and they will be introduced at half time of the N.Y.U. game. The Queen will be announced that night and crowned at the Homecoming Dance.

This weekend the Georgetown University Invitational Chess Tournament will be held in the New South Faculty Lounge. At the time of publication, Catholic University, Howard, and Hampton Institute had already accepted invitations. Spectators are welcome.

Oct. 26, Ivars Zageris, a graduate student in economics, played an 11 board simultaneous exhibition at the Chess Club. Zageris won seven games and lost four. His losses were to Ned Case, Bruce Leslie, Conrad Wozalski, and Helen de Chabert. We offer below what was probably the most spectacular of the games played.

How to tell if you're an Ale Man

You'd rather play football than watch.

You don't let a little thing like cold weather interfere with your surfing. You wear a wet suit and go. Go, go.

You still think James Bond books are better than James Bond movies.

You know the name and phone number of your Ballantine Ale distributor by heart. You should. You've called him enough to arrange for parties.

"Your friends think that four-on-the-floor is it. Your last car had a five-speed box."

You don't have to read an ad like this to find out if you're an Ale Man. You know you're an Ale Man because you graduated from beer ages ago. But you're still explaining to your friends how Ballantine Ale is light like beer but packs a lot more taste. You wish they'd discover the clean, dry, tangy taste of Ballantine for themselves—and let you do the things an Ale Man likes to do.

Dedicated to AleMen everywhere.
May their numbers increase.

Ski Team Getting In Shape
Schedules Trips, Socials

Lack of snow seemingly does not dampen the spirits of the members of the newly formed ski team which can be seen practicing in the lower field or the revered slopes of Observatory Hill. Although the skis have not yet been brought out, calisthenics and special ski racing exercises are preparing the group for the day they will take to the mountains of Pennsylvania with the coming of the first snow.

Thomas Roberts, captain of the team, announced the season schedule which includes meets with Boston College, Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, and Middlebury.

“A very formidable group of opponents,” Roberts said, “We have been impressed with our surprising strength and depth, and consequently plan to do very well in the conference. Many of our men have raced and beat the racers who make up these other teams.”

The team, which has 23 members at present, is part of the George-town University Ski Club. The team effort is directed by Roberts, Dave Rupert and Coach Benedek, a former member of the Hungarian Ski Team.

A good deal of skepticism has arisen over the relative merits of the team and the possibility for a winning season. “The dormant interest,” Roberts said, “and skeptical attitudes give us something to work for. At the end of the year we guarantee that some of our trophies will be on display in McDonough.”

The Ski Club is promising an interesting year. A trip to Colorado during spring break, one to Vermont before Christmas and a Winter Carnival during semester break as well as several day trips are on the agenda for this year. The Winter Carnival will be held at Laurel Mountain in Pennsylvania at a price stated to be less than last year’s.

Polo Team Beats Potomac:
Play Full Game, Reilly Star

In one of the finest polo matches the Georgetown polo team has ever hosted, Georgetown defeated the Potomac Polo Club 5-2. This was Georgetown's second win in the season having previously tied two weeks ago with Harvard.

The game was played Sunday at the Potomac Polo Club's home grounds which is also Georgetown's. Georgetown's first and second best players were rated at five goals and it was mutually agreed to play as even a match as possible.

Bob Reilly, Georgetown's captain, played on a winning team and was really the third best player on the field. As Reilly is a student and the first and second best players were rated by the U.S.P.A. at 5 and 6 goals respectively, Reilly proved to be quite an accomplished player. With the pressure from the rated players of Potomac, quite strong, Reilly managed to score the first goal in a very tight game. During the first chukkar Reilly knocked the ball between the uprights but it was disqualified because of the team's fouling Potomac's No. 2 player. He came back again a few minutes later and scored it for Georgetown. Reilly scored two more for Georgetown and Romy Garces also scored one goal.

The weather was rather cold and since this game was played with six chukkars and four men to a side, the fans were treated to a full, brisk afternoon of polo.

Potomac's team was constantly playing a rough game with much bumping and mouth as well as many aggressive plays by the Potomac team. This made Georgetown rise above their college level. Every second counted for Georgetown and Romy Garces maintained the necessary support that Reilly and Rino needed for their attacks. Potomac. (Continued on Page 14)

HOYAS DEMOLISH CU CARDINALS 50-13

Tony Eben, the sharpshooter of many a sharpshooter, scored Stagetimes, all in the first half. Larry Salustro, a reserve fullback, chipped in two touchdowns, and Joe Dukett one. But Mike Lauinger, who did not score in the Hoyas' previous game, scored 12 goals for a total of 36 and 180 in the air.

The Hoyas, whose incongruous no-history dates go back to 1909, demonstrated real virtuosity. They exhibited very steady and, at times, spectacularly.

Against the powerful Wildcats, the Hoyas scored the first time they got the ball, and laughed all the way to the goal line behind a wall of blue-shirted blockers. Seconds later, a Cardinal missed the Hoyas' second scoring opportunity. Lauinger brought the Hoyas to goal-line at the two and Joe Dukett lost the ball in the end zone and Angus Christi­vallo recovered for the Cards.

Given a life, CU launched a drive almost from the Hoyas' goal line. It ended in three aerials. It ended in three aerials. It ended in three aerials.

The Hoyas followed with an all-strikeback development, a cuff given the Hoyas a second scoring opportunity. Lauinger brought the Hoyas a second touchdown and three aerials.

For two years running the Hoyas were still aching on the other hand, they did for that momentary emphasis, moved through the air as necessary, moved through the air as necessary, moved through the air as necessary, moved through the air as necessary, moved through the air as necessary, moved through the air as necessary.

Injuries. On the other hand, they did for that momentary emphasis, moved through the air as necessary. At Annapolis, the Hoyas were still aching on the other hand, they did for that momentary emphasis, moved through the air as necessary.
