What is the youngest age that someone should have a smartphone or a tablet?

Respondents believed that it was much more appropriate for young children (under the age of 10) to have a tablet device than a smartphone. However, smartphones were considered more appropriate than tablets for older children and teenagers (between the ages of 11 and 20).