On September 8th, 1954, His Excellency, the Most Reverend Jeremiah Francis Minihan, A.B. '25 was consecrated Titular Bishop of Paphos and Auxiliary Bishop of Boston in a brilliant three hour ceremony in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston. Consecrator was His Excellency, the Most Reverend Richard James Cushing, Archbishop of Boston. The Co-Consecrators were the Most Reverend Vincent Stanislaus Waters, Bishop of Raleigh and the Most Reverend John Joseph Wright, Bishop of Worcester. Right Reverend Monsignor Edward Gerard Murray preached the consecration sermon.

Georgetown men of the mid-twenties remember the new bishop as the scrappy center of Lou Little's first Georgetown football team in 1924. He has always been very close to his Alma Mater, having served the Alumni Association as a member of its original Board of Governors, and for fourteen years as a member of the Alumni Senate. Large numbers of Georgetown men were present at the Consecration. Among those in the throng of three thousand who witnessed the rites were Very Reverend Edward B. Bunn, S.J., President of the University, Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S.J., former Dean of the College during Bishop Minihan’s student days, and Rev. Vincent A. Gookin, S.J., former Professor of Chemistry.

The new Bishop's coat of arms, designed by Mr. Robert Walsh of Boston, is pictured on this page. The surface or field of the shield is blue, when the coat of arms is drawn in color. It contains three charges or devices, a crown, spears, and shamrocks. The first two of these, the golden crown and the three silver spears, are an allusion to the family name of Minihan. The crown is taken from the shield of Munster (Eire), since the surname Minihan means in Gaelic “descendants of Munster men.” The three spears recall an ancient legend concerning the forebears of the Bishop’s family, who were of the O’Driscoll sept. After they had returned to Munster from a defensive expedition in a neighboring province, they alone retained the surname Minihan.
The three silver shamrocks, which are set upon the blue field around the crown, are a tribute to the late William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston from 1907 to 1944, whose coat of arms bore these three charges in green and silver. Bishop Minihan served His Eminence as Secretary and as Chancellor of the Archdiocese of Boston.

In the upper compartment of the shield a red ship is placed upon a silver background. This refers to the Bishop’s descent from O’Driscoll, who before the twelfth century were the first family of South Munster and whose silver shield bore a two masted ship.

A mitre, processional cross, and crozier or pastoral staff, all in gold, surmount the shield. Above them is placed the green pontifical hat with its twelve tassels hanging at the sides of the shield. The hat and the other insignia indicate the rank of bishop and represent the episcopal office.

Bishop Minihan’s father, Mr. Timothy Minihan, 84, was present for the happy occasion, as were his two sisters, his brother Dr. John C. Minihan, ’40, and the widow and two children of his brother Daniel J. Minihan, ’29.

Only one other alumnus now holds episcopal rank, the Most Reverend Jose M. Cuenco, ’07, Archbishop of Jaro, Philippine Republic.

On October 12, Bishop Minihan will come to Georgetown to receive an honorary degree in McDonough Gymnasium at a special convocation of the entire University.

SECRETrY OF THE NAVY, C. S. A.

S. R. MALLORY, CONFEDERATE NAVY CHIEF, by Joseph T. Durkin, S.J., Chapel Hill, N. C.,

(University of North Carolina Press, $6.00)

Reviewed by Rev. John M. Daley, S.J., Dean of the Graduate School

Father Joseph T. Durkin, Professor of American History in the College and Graduate School, has just completed the first biography of the Secretary of the Confederate Navy, Stephen R. Mallory. The book will be published in September 1954 by the University of North Carolina Press.

The subject was suggested to Father Durkin by his devoted friend and mentor the late Douglas Southall Freeman, author of R. E. Lee, Lee's Lieutenants, and the definitive life of George Washington. Dr. Freeman had agreed to write the preface for the book but his untimely death thwarted this desire.

In recommending that the University of North Carolina Press accept the manuscript Dr. Freeman wrote: "Father Durkin has had access to material no other writer has tapped. He has chosen, in addition, to write about the man who was, I think, with the possible exception of Judah P. Benjamin, the ablest man in President Davis's Cabinet. Mallory was, moreover, a first class administrator, almost the equal of Josiah Gorgas...I recommend it [the manuscript] to you as sound, scholarly, and on a theme distinctly worth presenting...It will, in my judgment, be, when published, a standard and definitive work on a little-known aspect of Confederate history."

The book is probably the most complete history of the Confederate Navy yet written, and brings to light some hitherto-hidden facts about that short-lived but gallant and effective organization. It was Mallory's department which put into action the first iron-clad vessel of war ever to ride the seas. This caused a major revolution in naval design and necessitated the scrapping of wooden ships of war by all the great navies of the world. The Confederates constructed the first submarine vessel capable of combat. They also invented the first underwater mines or torpedoes and planted them for the first time in history in the Potomac near Aquia creek. Besides these achievements the Confederate Navy, beginning with practically nothing, dangerously crippled the shipping of the North by means of the famous commerce raiders, and stood off the superior forces of the Union for almost four years.

Mallory was a Catholic, from Florida. His son graduated from Georgetown College in 1869, and received his M.A. here in 1871. He founded the Mallory Prize Essay in History, a competition engaged in annually by the students of the College.

One of the features which Dr. Freeman praised in the book is the space awarded to Mallory's personal and "human" life. Mrs. Mallory was a fascinating and colorful person, and she takes an important part in the story. Mallory's daughter Ruby is also a piquant character. Georgetown College appears in the last chapter, in connection with Mallory's son's struggles there.

This is Father Durkin's second book in the field of Confederate history. His first, John Dooley Confederate Soldier was published in 1945, with its preface written by Dr. Freeman. The volume was chosen as book-of-the-month by The Catholic Book Club and received national prominence when it was found to be one of the books on the then President Truman's night table.

Father Durkin is currently engaged in writing a history of American thought.

S. R. Mallory may be ordered from your local bookstore or from the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, North Carolina. The price is $6.00.

THIS BOY is wanted at home to run errands—to put away the toys he left in the driveway—and for his weird, wonderful sense of humor. He may be carrying a sling-shot, some bubble gum, a skate key, and a rabbit’s foot.

THIS GIRL is wanted at home to care for her dolls, the kittens and to help mother do her shopping. She may be carrying a yellow purse, some jacks, a rag doll and her hair may be tied with a red ribbon.

They are both wanted in school for questioning in connection with the proper spelling of Cincinnati.

MOST OF ALL THEY ARE WANTED FOR LOVE.

They are carefree and harmless, but, unfortunately, they are very easily harmed. Let them get to school and home again without an accident.
