The 120,000 punch cards which were used to prepare the 1957 Georgetown University Alumni Directory, are checked by James S. Ruby, '27, Editor, and James P. Reed, '53, Coordinator of the project. The cards will be retained for future Directories. Story on page 2.

At Long Last

By James S. Ruby, '27

After more than twenty-four months of exacting, gruelling, and occasionally, discouraging work, the Alumni Directory for 1957 (sometime promised for 1956) is off the press, through the bindery, and on its way to those who ordered copies.

The story of the Directory will never be fully told in these pages. It was conceived about five years ago, as a complete historical record of all of the sons (and daughters) of Georgetown from the entrance of William Gaston of North Carolina in 1791, down to the latest matriculated student. The Directory, when completed, would erase the necessity for any subsequent complete listings, making it only necessary, in the future, to list names and current addresses of the living.

The expense of the undertaking became a necessary consideration. The editorial and clerical research required for the project would require at least $20,000. The best estimate we could obtain for placing the names, degrees and addresses on punch cards came to $7,000. The low bid for letterpress printing of a quality commensurate with that of the 1947 Directory came to $39,000. Those prices, as of 1956, would have meant that the break-even price for the publication of a complete Directory, for an anticipated demand of 4,000 copies, would have been $16.50 per copy, and we knew that at such a price the book would not sell.

But the demand for the Directory persisted, and after experimenting with various methods of reproduction, it was suggested that we by-pass type composition and reproduce by offset printing directly from the listings produced from the punch-cards. That decision resulted in the saving of some $27,000, but still placed the volume outside the realm of possibility until the President of Georgetown, Very Rev. Edward B. Bunn, S.J., knowing the beneficial impact which the planned book would have, offered the University's backing in the project.

As a result of that guarantee, we were able to proceed in the late summer of 1955 with the preparation of the materials for the Directory.

The book as it will come to you this month, actually cost upwards of $11.00 per copy. Through the backing of the University we were able to sell it at a prepublication price of $5.50 and at $6.50 per copy to those who ordered it for future payment.

Each Alumnus of record received two questionnaires asking for accurate information not only for listing in the Directory, but to aid the Association in keeping in contact with him in the future. Approximately 40 per cent of our list supplied the requested data. For the remainder, we relied upon local committees to verify the addresses of those who did not reply. We also relied on local committees to help us track down those alumni with whom the University had lost contact over the years. In both of these endeavors we were ably aided, as the completed book will show.

To illustrate the completeness of the venture, we have listed five former students by their last names only, because the Treasurer's and Dean's records of these men of the early nineteenth century have suffered from the ravages of time to the extent that first names have been obliterated or rendered unreadable. Similarly, one man whose first name is all that can be deciphered from the records, is also listed.

The punch-card-to-paper method is completely new in a venture of this kind. Naturally, we ran into problems. We had set our sights for November of 1956 for the appearance of the book. However, production actualities fell far behind the salesman's promises, and we were nowhere near presentation of the volume when the expected date approached. When the punch cards were finally ready in March of 1957, we ran into further production problems in the listing of our materials for the printer.

After five agonizing days we had to revise our plans again and practically begin anew. Finally, the printing of the volume, which was to have required four weeks, stretched into twelve. But on August 5, 1957, the first copy came from the bindery to become Georgetown history. Through all of the delays, thanks to modern procedures, we were able to keep the addresses listed up to date as far as possible. Hence, the Directory is really more usable now than it would have been at the originally scheduled date of its appearance.

The book as it comes to you this month, is as complete and accurate as our enthusiastic staff could make it. It probably has its weaknesses, but they are merely a reflection upon the weaknesses of the earlier records of the various departments of Georgetown. These weaknesses are very few, considering the size of the publication, but you can add a great deal to the correction of these flaws by notifying your Alumni House immediately of any errors you find.

Take justifiable pride in the fact that no other University has produced a more complete roster than the Georgetown Alumni Directory, 1957. Only four hundred copies remain unordered. They are being offered first to the active members of the Association. If any copies remain six weeks after publication, they will be placed on general sale.
The discontinuance on March 21, 1951, of intercollegiate football, which had been played by Georgetown since 1874, gave rise to widely varied opinions among Alumni as to the advisability of that action. In the years that have followed, there has been a considerable amount of dissatisfaction expressed vocally at functions wherever Georgetown men gather.

Because of this the Georgetown Club of Washington decided that some measures should be taken to reduce the opinions of the alumni to writing for presentation to the University. Consequently, a poll was taken of the members of the Club and the immediate and very substantial response received indicated a great interest in the subject among those canvassed.

From the replies received, a very comprehensive and painstaking report, consisting of forty-eight printed pages, was prepared under the supervision of John Ford Baecher, C '25, L '28.

Basically, our questionnaire asked the following main questions: (1) Do you favor resumption of intercollegiate football at Georgetown? (2) If intercollegiate football is resumed by Georgetown, do you favor (a) big-time football, (b) so-called Ivy League-type football, or (c) small-time football?

The statistical presentation of the voting was broken down into a great number of categories, but space will permit setting forth here only what might be termed the major categories. The vote of the total membership on question one was as follows: Favoring resumption 84.31 per cent, not favoring resumption 13.15 per cent, undecided 2.53 per cent.

The vote by classes grouped by years is interesting. It is as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Class Group</th>

<th>Not Favoring</th>
<th>Undecided</th>

With respect to this last group, except for the class of 1951, some or all of their years at Georgetown have been without intercollegiate football.

The vote of the total membership on question two was as follows: Prefer Big Time football 21.33 per cent, prefer Ivy League type 73.66 per cent, prefer Small Time type 5.00 per cent.

Other questions were asked designed to ascertain if the answerer thought that the resumption of football would aid in turning out more mature and loyal-to-school-type graduates; (2) make his recommendations of Georgetown to prospective students more persuasive; (3) stimulate his interest in Georgetown. The percentage answers to (1) were: Affirmative 79.21, negative 20.78; to (2) : Affirmative 74.83, negative 25.16; to (3) : Affirmative 81.38, negative 18.61.

By far the most interesting and informative part of the report is the thirty pages devoted to the question of comments that were received, and the headings under which they are set out is indicated from the following portion of the table of contents of the report:

"3. Comments of Voters (a) Concerning this poll—Alumni spirit secondarily, (b) Some general thoughts, (c) The cost is prohibitive and isn’t, (d) Financial considerations are important, (e) Professionalism is inevitable and isn’t, (f) Suggesting money is not everything, (g) Suggesting an athletic policy reappraisal, (h) Concerning other sports, (i) Public notice of continuity of activity of the university.

"(t) Detached viewpoints, (u) Old-timer’s speak, (v) Fathers about sons, (w) Concerning the place for games, (x) Suggesting this thing is controllable—and a plan, (y) Suggesting modest beginnings, (z) Suggesting an inexpensive plan, (aa) Inquiring can Georgetown do it? (bb) Alumni support volunteered, (cc) Convinced Georgetown can do it!"

No effort was made to emphasize either those comments in favor of resumption or those opposed to resumption. All comments received were quoted verbatim, except such as were completely facetious and of no practical value one way or the other. Included among the comments, both for and against, are some extremely intelligent and well-considered remarks, offered by persons who obviously have the interests of Georgetown at heart.

The Georgetown Club of Washington only wishes that its finances were of such proportions as would have permitted the distribution of the report to all active members of the Alumni Association. A limited number of copies of the report are available at $1.00 each for anyone wishing to have the complete report.

The report has been submitted to the University for consideration with the expressed hope that it may be of value in furthering the interests of Georgetown and with the statement that if it accomplishes that, even in small measure, the effort and expense that has been involved will have been well worthwhile.

DOCTOR OF THE YEAR

On April 20, 1957, Dr. William P. Argy was named Doctor of the Year by the Georgetown Clinical Society. This award in a way was a fitting culmination of thirty-six years of intimate association with the University in professional and private life.

Dr. Argy graduated from the College in 1920 and received his M.D. in 1922. The following year he was appointed Instructor in Medicine, and has been affiliated with the Medical School ever since. In 1927 he was appointed Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine and served as Director of Clinics from 1931 to 1933. He set up the first Insulin Clinic at old Georgetown Hospital in the days when insulin therapy for diabetes was in its infancy.

In this work he was associated with Dr. Winfred Barton and Dr. Harry Ong. In 1951, in its first presentation by the University, Dr. Argy was awarded the Vicennial medal in recognition of twenty years’ service. In February of this year he was named Professor of Medicine, Emeritus.

His endeavors in the field of medical education do not, however, stop here. For twenty-four years, Dr. Argy was Chief of Medicine at Providence Hospital in Washington, where he is still Consultant-in-Chief.

In 1951, Dr. Argy became Medical Director of the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children. Here, he was instrumental in a great reorganization and expansion program. In recognition of his work in this field, he was recently named a Diplomat of the American Academy of Cerebral Palsy.

He is also a Diplomat of the American Board of Internal Medicine, the American College of Physicians, the Kober Medical Society and the Washington Society of Pathologists.

His interests, however, have not been confined to medicine, extensive as that field is. Dr. Argy has been a well-known civic leader. He is a member of Rotary International, the Merrick Boys Club, the Catholic Youth Organization, and is also a director of the Criminal Justice Association of the District of Columbia.

In the many fields with which Dr. Argy has endeavored, he has brought honor to his alma mater, and it was in recognition of his long and devoted labors in medicine that he was given the Clinical Society award this year.
The Georgetown Alumni Club of Metropolitan New York held its annual Golf Outing and dinner at the Apawam's Country Club, Rye, N.Y., on June 20th, and in an unprecedented feature awarded its “Alumni Man of the Year” citation to Leo V. Klauberg, '16, long-time president of the Club, sometime member of the Board of Governors of the National Alumni Association, and presently a very active member of the Alumni Senate.

The Summer Golf Outing and Dinner of the Connecticut Georgetown Club was held at Danbury, Conn., on July 23rd. The fourth annual “Georgetown Man of the Year” award was presented to Alphonsus A. Donahue, '38. Rev. Gerard F. Yates, S.J., of the faculty, represented the University.

The first general Alumni gathering in Santa Fe, N.Mex., was a dinner on the evening of June 25th, attended by ten of the twelve Alumni in the area, together with their wives. James S. Ruby, '27, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association was the speaker for the occasion.

The Alumni of Albuquerque, N. Mex., gathered on June 26th to honor Georgetown's Vice-President, Rev. Brian A. McGrath, S.J., and to lay the foundations for an Alumni Club. Hon. Claud S. Mann, '25, was elected President.

Father McGrath and Dr. Ruby attended the meetings of the Conference of Jesuit Alumni Administrators at Santa Monica, Calif., on June 29th and 30th, and the Annual Conference of the American Alumni Council in Pasadena on July first to 5th. While there they had an opportunity on July 2nd to meet with a large company of the Georgetown Club of Los Angeles at a dinner which included the wives of many members. James G. Butler, '48, retiring President of the Club was responsible for the arrangements. Francis J. Hanrahan, '50, was elected to the presidency.

The University Vice-President and the Executive Secretary were also guests of the Georgetown Club of Northern California at a stag luncheon at the Leopard Cafe on July 10th, attended by seventy-five sons of Georgetown from the San Francisco area. Frederic Murphy, '32, President of the Club, presided. Later in the week, our golden jubilarian, George M. Mann, '07, was host to the Georgetown visitors at luncheon in his office suite.

Father McGrath also visited Georgetown's Rocky Mountain Alumni Club, being entertained at a luncheon at the Denver Club. Mark Hogan, '52, President of the Club, made the arrangements.

The Georgetown Alumni Club of Washington held its annual Golf Outing at Congressional Country Club on May 21st, attended by some 400 of the local Alumni. This affair is growing in numbers and in excellence each year. E. R. Ferguson, '33, President of the Club, presided both at the dinner and at the annual automobile raffle for the Club's Scholarship Fund. Five students in the University are now being carried on D. C. Alumni Scholarships.

The President's Room
July 17, 1957

Dear Leo:

I can imagine no greater pleasure than making this public recognition of my personal esteem for you and that of the University and Faculty of Georgetown. Your persevering, devoted labors for the cause of the University have stimulated many of your confreres to active participation in events of the Georgetown Metropolitan Club of New York.

Your dedicated service to the spiritual welfare of Georgetown men by the establishment of the annual Retreat and its great growth through the years marked you as an ideal son of Saint Ignatius.

Let me, in the name of all the Jesuits here, publicly congratulate you on this occasion when your fellow members of the Georgetown Club are selecting you for distinction. My only regret is that I cannot be present. I told John Finnegan over the phone that the Prime Minister of Japan will be here and I must be present to confer honors upon him.

May your trip to Europe be teeming with blessings from our dear Savior, Who loves you for your apostolic zeal manifested at all times in all places.

Affectionately,
Edward B. Bunn, S.J.

Mr. Leo V. Klauberg, C '16
November 10, 1793 lives in the history of human thought and action as a day of infamy. That was the day when the frenzied mob, at the height—or the low point—of the French Revolution stormed into the Cathedral of Notre Dame, cast aside the crucifix and all other symbols of religion, and enshrined above the high altar a wanton actress as the goddess of Reason. That was an hour of triumph for the protagonists of false liberalism, the apotheosis of rationalistic pride in the rejection of God.

Dealing with such a terrific upheaval as the French Revolution, there is grave danger in oversimplification. Its roots extend deep into history, and its branches survive and bring forth their fetid fruit even in our own day. But it is safe to assert that among the identifiable causes of the cataclysm—in the revolt of the oppressed masses against tyranny; in all the political and social and economic pressures which contributed to the flood tide of destruction—the rationalistic and sceptical spirit of the eighteenth century played no small part. Voltaire and Diderot and D'Alembert, and that master of rationalistic humanism, Jean Jacques Rousseau, had done their work well in that age of so-called Enlightenment, in undermining faith and religion, and extolling human powers, even unto the deification of human reason.

At the same time it is significant that this enthronement of reason took place in the mid-point of that year of bloody excesses that is known to history as the Reign of Terror. It is indicative, I think, of what may always be expected when human reason endeavors to liberate itself from higher controlling powers of faith and religion. The end-product is always degradation and destruction, and an irrational denial of reason itself.

Yet this incident in the French Revolution is but one of the more melodramatic and spectacular events in the age-long history of human rebellion and self-exaltation. We can see the same spirit illustrated in the story of the Fall of our First Parents; it is evident in the adoration of the golden calf, when the people of Israel worshipped the product of human ingenuity, while their God was giving His law to Moses on the mountain; it is implicit in ancient Greek philosophy which made “man, the measure of all things.”

And the same spirit is abroad in our own day. We see it in the Marxian aphorism that “Religion is the opiate of the people,” and in the less blatant, but no less rebellious assertion too commonly made that God and religion and mortality have no place in our education, in our research, in our politics and our business.

Human reason is one of the greatest glories of mankind, one of the supreme gifts of the Creator. It is the faculty which elevates man from all other creatures of earth, and makes him in the image and likeness of God. And in the exercise of that God-given faculty, he has been given the mandate to dominate the earth. How far man has progressed in discovering and utilizing the secrets of nature is a theme far too long in the telling for a brief address. And yet in the midst of all this prosperity and progress, there is manifest also a great deal of confusion, of uncertainty and of restless anxiety.
One of the reasons for this confusion is the spirit of scientific positivism characteristic of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. We have been so impressed, and rightly impressed, with the achievements in the natural sciences, that we have come to look to science for the answers to all human problems.

In their own fields, in the investigation and application of physical phenomena, the sciences are a wonderful example of the exercise of human reason, and a valuable source of sound and solid truth. But the truth of science is limited, restricted in the main to quantitative rather than qualitative approach. And when there rises a question of values, science stops, and another exercise of human reason must take over.

Let me briefly illustrate this point by a short quotation from a writer of deep insight, Dr. Karl Stern, in his penetrating study of the relations of psychiatry and religion:

"If one denies the existence of things beyond the natural, the only possible conclusion is a philosophy of 'nothing but'—a philosophy of debunking. This is common to all materialist schools of the nineteenth century indeed to all schools of thought which look on nature as something outside a Christocentric sphere. To a modern astronomer, the earth is 'nothing but' an insignificant speck in the galaxy; to the biologist, man is 'nothing but' some chance product of an evolutionary process which has no transcendental meaning; to a dialectical materialist cultural achievements are 'nothing but' by-products of the economic struggle."

The effect of a rationalistic approach to the problems of human life is to depersonalize the man, and reduce him to the status of an object, a thing, a statistical unit. A great deal of this is evident in our approach today to the social sciences. We have become enamored of statistics, of numerical groupings, of a quantitative approach to human life and behavior, which can be drawn on charts and graphs.

The so-called "scientific method" has become so predominant in our social thinking that a whole new field of investigation has opened, under the name of "cybernetics". Social philosophy, in this system, is reduced to the computation of units inscribed on a punched card. And at times the most outrageous conclusions are drawn from the flimsiest premises.

The quantitative approach which is so much in vogue in social thinking and studies is not only erroneous, but it can be disastrous; for it has a deadly "leveling" effect in which the facets of human personality and individuality must necessarily be suppressed, and, in areas where any kind of hierarchy of values is concerned, it is very apt to corrode those values, without an objective and independent norm outside the statistics themselves.

Let me illustrate this point again by reference to Dr. Stern in his "Third Revolution"; and confining our thought for the present to purely aesthetic values, rather than religious or moral:

"A symphony of Mozart is more beautiful than jukebox music; a Rembrandt painting is more beautiful than a magazine cover. But there is no method in social sciences which would help to support or to deny this hierarchy of values. A sociologist might find, by questionnaire methods, that there are areas in which 93 per cent of the people prefer magazine covers to Rembrandts. In another area the reverse might be true. We might even find factors which would account for these differences in taste. Yet the question of intrinsic value—what makes one thing more beautiful than another—remains untouched."

How disastrous and foolish, when human reason, however refined and cultivated by diligent study and research, attempts to enter into that realm which can only be entered by faith—in the relationship of man with God, in the working out of his destiny, not by the sole norm of what his reason has discovered to be true, but by the laws of justice and charity, of mercy and submission to God which have been revealed to man by the Creator Himself.

There is scarcely an idea in human life, among all that we take so much for granted and glibly discuss in human terms, which is not ultimately derived from a source which far transcends the limits of human power to discover or to adumbrate. We speak of freedom and equality among men—but on what terms can these precious qualities be validated, other than on religious terms?
Liberty is not a right which can be defended logically or ontologically, without reference to a Supreme Being who gave to all men that right.

On a purely rationalistic basis, it is impossible to impugn the doctrine that might makes right—it is most "reasonable" that the strong should dominate and enslave the weak. Without the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man is absolute nonsense. And in what sense, other than a religiously-inspired sense, can the equality of all men be seriously postulated?

What has a cultured artist in common with a savage tom-tom beater in the jungle? On scientific and rationalistic principles, very little on which to base a judgment of equality; but on Christian principles and revelation, in the light of Creation and Redemption, in the view which looks to the soul of man, and not alone to the extrinsic trappings of flesh or raiment, the so-called savage is no less valuable, no less worthy of reverence and respect than the refined and cultivated gentleman.

Man has been given the faculty of reason in order that he may seek out truth in the natural order—whether physical, social, aesthetic or psychic. But the whole truth is not confined to the natural and the rational world. There is a whole economy of grace, there is a whole world of spiritual life and activity which is open to the eyes of faith.

First of all, faith, in its theological essence, is an exercise of the same faculty as human reason—namely, the intellect of man. But whereas in the conclusions of reason, the evidence and the authority is the falible and imperfect intellect of man, the authority of faith is the infinite source of truth, God Himself. Faith is described in the Epistle to the Hebrews as "the evidence of things unseen"—the acceptance of things which are beyond the reach of human reason, because of the authority, the integrity, the goodness of the one revealing the truth.

The acceptance of faith supersedes, but does not contradict, human reason. Indeed, if we examine the subject closely, we see that the exercise of faith is the highest possible use to which human reason can be put. For after all, the rationalist himself has to make many acts of faith in his thinking—he has to have a faith in his own intellectual power to know; he has to believe in the validity of his thought-processes; unless he is to explore for himself the whole vast field of human knowledge, he has to accept a whole world of thought and of principle on the authority of other men.

Compare this act of faith of the human thinker, relying on purely human instruments, as fallible as himself, with the act of faith pronounced by the Christian believer—his authority is not fallible, is not subject to error or prejudice or bias. Nor does Christian revelation emanate from one who is, so to speak "expert" in only one given field, as are human authorities, but from One who is Himself all Truth, eternal, infinite and immutable.

Nor does faith ever completely exclude the exercise of human reason, but rather calls upon reason to prepare the way for its acceptance, by examination of the evidence for the existence of a Supreme Being, by scrutiny of His "credentials," so to speak, in the historicity and the authenticity of His revelations, and by a deeper understanding of the content and meaning of revelation. And human reason is again called into play, in translating the doctrines of faith from intellectual acceptance into the practicalities of everyday living.

Faith without good works, we know, is dead—useless and unfruitful. But faith, suffused with trust in God and enlivened by charity, is the guiding light of weak and fallible mankind, the "kindly light," as Newman so poignantly expressed it, "amid the encircling gloom." This is the sincere, firm, living and active faith described by our Holy Father in his Easter letter last year.

Mankind today needs not less exercise of reason, but more exercise of faith. Reason divorced from the guidance of faith tends to puff man with pride in himself, and too often and too sadly we have seen that self-exaltation humbled. Faith demands humility, and the humble shall be exalted. Faith alone will not solve all the multiplicity of human problems which face us, in our individual, social, national and international life and activity; but it will shield us from the error of seeking the answers to those problems; where no solution is to be found.

For the ills of the world are not the effects of ignorance alone, but of perversity will. And for the baffling problem of evil—for the suffering and affliction of the innocent, while the wicked prosper and grow fat—there is no answer in all the investigations of science, in all the charts and demographic laws of the most profound social philosophy. These problems can only find their solution at the foot of the Cross.

"On the other hand, we see," says the Holy Father, "nothing more than a shadow of faith, doomed to defeat, in that vague, somewhat flabby and empty feeling for Christianity which never gets past the threshold of persuasion in the mind and of love in the heart."

Our age is troubled, anxious and uncertain, fearful of its own most amazing scientific discoveries, because we too have in our own way enthroned human reason in the sacred precincts of God's temple of the world; nor will we ever know peace and lasting security until Christ is restored to His rightful place, and mankind, and all man's human powers, are laid in loving and worshipful homage before His altar. For Christ is the only one who has ever had, or ever will have, the right to say in all truth, "Fear not; I have overcome the world."

In the words of our Holy Father—"Faith is a light, a food and a shield for life. It is the banner upon which victory will smile in the spiritual combat which every Christian is called upon to wage, according to the explicit words of the Apostle St. John: 'This is the victory that overcomes the world, our faith.'" (1 Jo. 5,4).
NIPPON REPRESENTATIVES
JAPANESE MANCHURIAN POLICY

Because of the intense and universal interest which has been aroused by the Manchurian situation, the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University, under the direct auspices of its seminar devoted to a study of Asiatic affairs, opened on last Friday evening a series of lectures in which proponents of both the Chinese and Japanese views on the matter may be heard by Georgetown students. For the opening of this series the Japanese side, represented by Count Kabayama and Mr. Komatsu, set forth clearly and concisely their country’s intentions as regards Manchuria.

The exposition was presided over by the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., regent of the School of Foreign Service. In greeting the visitors, Fr. Walsh expressed the hope that this series would help to aid the American public reach a true estimation of the crisis in the Far East. He then introduced Mr. William F. Sands, a professor of foreign service and former minister to Korea. Mr. Sands conducts the Asiatic seminar of the college.

In the very beginning of his address Count Kabayama stressed the fact that the Manchurian situation is strictly an economic affair. “Japan,” said Count Kabayama, “must depend in some measure upon Manchuria for her natural resources, since she has little of her own.” He pointed out how a peaceful condition in Manchuria would be ideal both for China and for Japan. “But,” continued Count Kabayama, “the Manchurian warlords will not relinquish their present deathlike grip upon the province; they will continue to squeeze its inhabitants as long as they are in control.” He suggested that an impartial commission of international businessmen be appointed to consider the situation and concluded his lecture by a comparison of the constitutions of the countries involved as they differ from ours.

FRESHMAN THESPIANS
OFFER ONE-ACT PLAY

At a meeting of the “Mask and Bauble” Club on Thursday, January 14, a one-act play, entitled “Moonshine,” was presented by members of the Freshman Class. You can find rich rewards as an agent for the Farmers Insurance Group

Only 29 years ago the Farmers Insurance Group started with very small capital and big ideas.

Today we're considered the largest auto insurance company in the West. We have expanded into 25 states—from California to Illinois—and further growth depends only upon getting the right kind of men—like you, Georgetown alumni—to join us.

Our assets are over $192 million dollars. Actually many men who have joined us are now independently wealthy.

We have a unique approach to the insurance business which makes it easier to win success quickly. Even if you know nothing about the insurance business, we can teach you our "secrets" quickly—you can test our methods while you are still employed elsewhere, earn while you learn, and join us full time only after you have convinced yourself that Farmers Insurance Group offers the money making opportunity you want.

Write for information to the Home Office Sales Dept., 4680 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 54, California.

Or look in your phone book—if there is a Farmers Insurance Group office in your area, call on our District Manager and ask about money-making opportunities in our organization.
