Georgetown University, entering its 175th year, is now engaged in the third special celebration of its founding. In 1899, the year of the University's centennial, word went out in classical Latin announcing to the academic world the completion of Georgetown's first century. Three days of celebration—February 20, 21, and 22—were climaxed by the presentation, in Gaston Hall, of Centennial medals to Cardinal Gibbons and President Cleveland.

In 1939, the sesquicentennial year, the celebration extended for a week—May 28 to June 3—under a theme which celebrated the "double Sesquicentennial Anniversary" of Georgetown and the "adoption of a Federal Constitution which still endures as fundamental law from generation unto generation."
As both the University and the Constitution mark their one hundred and seventy-fifth year, Georgetown once again commemorates its past and looks forward to an expanding future. Under the theme “Wisdom and Discovery for a Dynamic World,” the Anniversary observance will attempt to bring into focus for the learned world the Georgetown image; to inspire the rededication of the faculty in teaching, research, and publication; to engage our students in special academic and professional programs and events; and to involve the alumni and friends of Georgetown everywhere in the excitement of the key ideas and challenges of our times.

The Anniversary program has a carefully worked out slogan — in which “Wisdom” stands for the resources of the classroom and our library collections; and “Discovery” for research in the laboratory and the scholar’s study, both being directed toward the practical necessities of professional life in today’s complex world. The program has a special symbol as well, one which, without in any sense being a substitution for our revered University seal, takes the elements from that seal and rearranges them to emphasize and embody the words of the theme. Thus the stylized eagle is shown holding a book with a cross, symbolizing Wisdom, in one claw; and in the other, symbolizing Discovery, the world surrounded by the atomic spiral. In the background, the thirteen stars of the University seal are arranged in an orbital path, to symbolize our Dynamic World. The official Anniversary colors are black, red, and gold, the colors of the coat of arms of the Carroll family, of which Charles Carroll of Carrollton and Archbishop John Carroll, our Founder, were such distinguished members.

Our Anniversary theme-slogan, our symbol, and the Carroll colors will be the distinguishing marks of the programs and booklets to be issued by Anniversary House. They will be featured on the binding and dust jackets of the volumes of the Wisdom and Discovery series, to be published by P. J. Kenedy & Sons. These publications will carry the Georgetown Anniversary story far beyond the boundaries of the campus, as will the pictorial history of Georgetown for which Father Joseph Durkin, S.J., is preparing the text, and the special supplement to the Washington Sunday Star, to be issued next Spring.

The anniversary celebration will begin on September 26, 1963, with a Mass of the Holy Spirit, at which the sermon will be preached by Father Donaghy, former President and Rector of Holy Cross College in Worcester, Massachusetts. This will be followed on the night of September 28, 1963, by a dinner for all full-time professors of the University and their wives (or husbands) Father Gerard Campbell, S.J., newly appointed Executive Vice President of the University will, on this occasion, be presented to the faculty and will speak on the theme of the Anniversary Year. The other principal address of the evening, on the role of a private university in a free society, will be delivered by Miss Rosemary Park, the President of Barnard College, New York City.

On October 12, the New York Chapter of the Georgetown Alumni Association will play host to the John Carroll Awards Dinner at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. The Vice President of the United States, the Honorable Lyndon Johnson (x-Law ’38), has graciously agreed to be the speaker on this occasion. The Reverend Robert I. Gannon, S.J. (A.B., ’13, Litt.D., ’37), former president of Fordham University and author of The Cardinal Spellman Story, will be toastmaster.

During the Anniversary Year which extends from September 26, 1963 to December 3, 1964, there will be five major convocations. The first of these is scheduled for October 28, 1963, and will commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the Georgetown Class of 1863, of which the later Chief Justice Edward D. White was a member. The principal address will be delivered by Chief Justice Earl Warren. It is hoped that as many as possible of some thirty-five Georgetown alumni who now sit upon a state or federal bench throughout the country will be present and share the platform with the Chief Justice.

On March 19, 1964, Robert Maynard Hutchins, former President of the University of Chicago and now President of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, will be the principal speaker at our Founder’s Day Convocation. Besides Dr. Hutchins, a number of other figures well-known to the educational world will receive honorary degrees.

The third convocation on June 10, 1964, besides being the regular commencement convocation, will commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the Invasion of Normandy, beginning the final chapter of the liberation of Europe. It will also honor all Georgetown men and women who have served their country in all its wars. We hope to have present at this convocation as many as possible of the surviving leaders of the American Army, Navy and Air Force in World War II and to confer upon several of them honorary degrees. During the summer, there will be another convocation, on a perhaps modest scale, the weather conditions in a Washington summer not being conducive to elaborate ceremonies.

The most important convocation of the year will be that of December 3, 1964, which will bring to a close the Anniversary Year celebration. December 3 is the anniversary of the death of Archbishop John Carroll, the Founder of Georgetown University, and we are hopeful that the principal address will be delivered by the President of the United States.

We intend to invite all living holders of honorary degrees from Georgetown University to honor this convocation with their presence. This would include all three living Presidents of the United States, and would make a notable gathering.

In addition to these convocations, the year will be made memorable by a series of special events. Walter Lippmann will deliver the Gaston Lecture at a date still to be set. A series of lectures entitled “The Robert Plunkett Series” and dealing generally with the humanities will include such personages as Christopher Hollis, C.P. Snow, Paul Horgan, Father William Lynch, S.J., Father Anthony Bischoff, S.J., Father Martin D’Arcy, S.J. and possibly Sir Herbert Reed, Flannery O’Connor and others.

There will be a series of ten science lectures spaced through the year, which will bring to the campus such men as Dr. McVittie of the University of Illinois, Dr. Dobzhansky of the Rockefeller Institute, Dr. Morse of MIT,... and other scholars of similar stature. Our Law School has also organized a series of lectures on subjects of interest to the legal profession. Lecturers will include outstanding professors of law in various universities of the country and, hopefully, the Attorney General, Robert Kennedy.

The Law School is sending a team of three faculty members to give lectures and have discussions with Law School alumni groups throughout the country during the Anniversary Year. Also, the President of Georgetown University, Father Bunn, will visit alumni groups during the year. In addition to this, professors of the University will be sent throughout the country to speak to alumni groups.

The great interest of Georgetown University, reflecting both its own traditional ties and the interest of the country as a whole in Latin America, will be manifested in two series of lectures dealing with problems of inter-American relations. Among those who have already graciously consented to participate are the highly-regarded former President of Colombia, Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, Dr. Felipe Herrera, President of the Inter-American Development Bank, Dr. Antonio Gomez Robledo of the Secretariat of Foreign Affairs in the Mexican Government, and others.

Etienne Gilson will come to the University in April 1964 to deliver four lectures in philosophy. This will be one of the highlights of the year. Another highlight will be the visit of the noted economist and lecturer, Lady Jackson, better known as Barbara Ward. In the Fall of 1964, the Medical Center proposes to bring to Georgetown Nobel Prize winners to deliver nine lectures over a period of three days.

Efforts are being made also to organize a series of lectures by recognized authorities in the general subject of the Jesuits and fine art. In collaboration with the Institute of Contemporary Arts, the University will also present a certain number of events in the field of the performing arts. Among these will be a concert by a noted Japanese artist who plays the rare Japanese musical instruments. There will be a dance group from northern India, a performance by a noted pioneer in the field of electronic music, and other events of the same calibre. One of the highlights of the year will be a concert at Constitution Hall in April, featuring the National Symphony Orchestra and the Georgetown University Glee Club at which an original composition composed for the Anniversary by the well-known composer Richard Dirksen will be played for the first time.

Among the important events of the Anniversary celebration period will be a certain number of conferences and symposia. On December 6 and 7, for example, the Anniversary program will co-sponsor, with the Edmund Burke Society of America, a symposium on "Edmund Burke in the Twentieth Century." In January there will be a conference which will attempt to come to grips with the problems of poverty in an affluent society. Among the participants at this conference will be Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, the noted New Yorker essayist Dwight Macdonald, and leading industrialists. The School of Foreign Service is sponsoring a series of three conferences involving students, employers, and educators. These conferences will attempt to explore the changing character of our country's world involvement, public and private, over the past decade and the implications of these changes for personnel requirements now and in the future.

In May, our Center for Strategic Studies will present a major conference dealing with problems of the Atlantic Community in which scholars from Europe and America will participate. It is expected that among those participating will be Jean Monnet.

The Summer School, in 1964, will present an impressive program including lectures by Father Lonergan of the Gregorian University in Rome, a special institute on sciptural studies, a writers' conference, a conference on social ethics, a symposium on international relations, a symposium by clinical psychologists. One of the major events of the summer will be a colloquium on West African nations which will be attended by scholars from Africa and Europe which will be followed by a four weeks' institute on African studies. Another event next summer will be a meeting of the Pax Romana. This will be the first time in twenty-five years that this international studies organization will have held its conference in the United States. In the Fall of 1964, we are planning a conference in which we expect to have the participation of scientists, military strategists and theologians to discuss the awesome problems related to thermonuclear power. Immediately preceding the final convocation of December 3, 1964, we hope to bring together a group of outstanding Jesuit theologians and philosophers to discuss the great question of human freedom. Among those who have already agreed to participate are Father Calvez, S.J., of the Action Populaire in Paris, Father Paul Henry, another noted French intellectual, Father John Courtney Murray, Father Robert Johann, Father William Lynch and Father Karl Rahner.

In January there will be a colloquium on West African nations which will be attended by scholars from Africa and Europe. Among those who have already agreed to participate are Father Calvez, S. J., of the Action Populaire in Paris, Father Paul Henry, another noted French intellectual, Father John Courtney Murray, Father Robert Johann, Father William Lynch and Father Karl Rahner. We hope also that Father Henri de Lubac will be able to participate in this conference. This conference will be followed immediately by the December 3 convocation, which will bring the year to a climactic conclusion.

Admission to most of the Anniversary events—the exceptions are concerts and other fine arts programs—will be without charge, and by invitation and tickets. All Georgetown alumni, in the Washington area and elsewhere, are most warmly welcomed to these events. Out-of-town alumni who may find themselves in Washington during the Anniversary celebration period should write or call Alumni House or Anniversary House (which is just next door) for tickets for themselves and for their guests. The Anniversary program will bring a series of memorable events to the Hilltop, and we look forward to sharing these events with all the sons and daughters of Georgetown.

Reverend Francis E. Lucey, S.J.,
The Georgetown Law Center
506 E Street, S. W.,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Father Lucey:

I was very sorry to hear yesterday from Father Power that the article in the Alumni Magazine concerning an "Evening With Francis Biddle" and the subsequent letter from Father Bunn were quite disturbing to you. I did not know of the differences of opinion you had had with Mr. Biddle, and I am sure the same is true concerning Father Bunn, and Dr. Keegan, who relayed to me the copy of the late Mr. Spruance's article with Father Bunn's supporting letter. I am also sure that Father Devine and Dean Gordon must have been unaware of the unpleasantness you had experienced from Mr. Biddle.

Be assured that the publication as well as the conference with Mr. Biddle was the product of ignorance on the part of all of us. I sincerely apologize for any distress the publication may have caused you.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES S. ROUX
Executive Secretary
Impressions of an Evening with FRANCIS BIDDLE

By Mr. Lambert H. Spronck, Jr., C ’63, Deceased, June 5, 1963

As a student, I think that I will always look back on the first Georgetown-to-Georgetown program as a fascinating experience. Francis Biddle was our guest lecturer. Dan Altobello and I arrived at the Biddles’ Georgetown home at 5:45 P. M. and were treated to an interesting perusal of some of the abstract art which adorns their home.

We proceeded to the “1789” where we had an enjoyable dinner with Georgetown residents, faculty, and students. At that dinner, I met Mr. James Robinson, President of the Georgetown Citizens Council, who saw the Georgetown-to-Georgetown idea as “another crack in the wall” of what he viewed as a rigid Catholic hierarchy. I spoke of hoping to have various Protestant pastors in the area to talk to the students on what it means to live in Georgetown and found Mr. Robinson asking me, “Are you a Catholic?” Of all the projected plans for Georgetown-to-Georgetown, I hope that this one is executed. Nothing, I repeat, nothing would do more for Georgetown than this.

As the dinner wore on into its later courses, I remember Mr. Biddle speaking to Fr. John Devine, S.J., concerning his past hopes for a Ford Grant to establish what he termed “a truly National College in Washington.” As Mr. Biddle continued in this vein, I thought to myself what it would mean for Georgetown if someday men of Mr. Biddle’s stature should look upon our school as such a university.

The most thought-provoking conversation around me seemed to be that between Dean Richard A. Gordon (of the Law School) and Mr. Biddle on what DeGaulle’s “grand non” meant for Europe. Dean Gordon defended DeGaulle, while Mr. Biddle viewed the General as something less than a friend. At dinner’s end, I will never forget Mr. Biddle’s one sentence reply to a lengthy eulogy of his varied careers: “It takes a friend to say something like that, and it takes a friend to listen to it.”

When we reached Copley Lounge, the greatest shock was seeing nine or ten people present. Mr. Biddle deserved more of an audience than that. Thanks greatly to Fr. Joseph Sweeney, S.J., and John Nugent, we wound up with 70-80 students finally present. Mr. Biddle spoke on the question, “Is Public Life Worth It?” His continued emphasis on power shook up his audience, who had obviously not been exposed to so forceful an exponent of pragmatism while at Georgetown.

While answering questions, Mr. Biddle denied the natural law. At first the audience laughed at the witty way in which he did so, and then settled down, somewhat shocked by his bluntness, to mull over what he had said. There was a complete lack of communication between a conservative questioner and Mr. Biddle. The student could not understand the New Dealer’s lack of an orthodox philosophy in dealing with the problems of government and power. Mr. Biddle could not understand what the student was driving at and thought him confused, which to an extent he was.

After the lecture Mrs. Biddle wanted me to get Mr. Biddle home soon as a result of his age. Mr. Biddle, however, preferred to reminisce and engage in lively controversy with students. Several students told me that it was the best discussion which they had ever heard while at Georgetown and regretted that more of our compatriots were not present. “Great . . . really tremendous . . . we should have more of these” abounded.

Georgetown-to-Georgetown can be a wedge so that people beyond our gates can get into the university and students can get out and meet some of the interesting people who live just beyond our walls. Unfortunately many people seem psychologically to regard our campus as what it physically appears to be while walking up “O” Street: an unapproachable fortress. If we are to be regarded by our neighbors throughout the area as the nation’s university, then we must do something to stop scaring them away with our Catholicity, our appearance as but another element in a rigid hierarchy. We do this better than most other Catholic universities, but apparently this is not even enough. I think that a God-centered university can open its arms and its mind to those around it, rather than keeping them closed. We are dealing here, of course, with intangibles, but unless such intangible changes in appearance and orientation are achieved, all our celebrations next year will continue to be ours, but not the nation’s capital nor the area’s.
A year ago last September a rumor spread concerning a new singing group on campus: a red vest, recalling the Georgetown uniform of the early 1800's, and a blue blazer, long rehersals and professionally arranged modern harmony or the Knights of Georgetown, also appropriately nick-named the "Restless Knights." Since their birth, the now two year old Restless ones have roamed and have sung hi and lo. Singing both modern and barbershop harmony, the Knights have appeared in clubs from New York to Florida including: the privilege of singing for a reception given by the President and Mrs. Kennedy, a TV performance from the Alibi in West Palm Beach and appearances at "Luigis" and the "Tropical Acres" in Delray, a dinner for the Chinese Refugee Relief given by Mrs. Claire Chen- nault, a reception for Bishop Fulton Sheen and the presidents of NBC, CBS and the Mutual Broadcasting Company, the pre-telecast performance for the National Cultural American Pageant of the Arts, and opening show at the new Americana Hotel in New York and well over 75 other appearances.

The night club act, in which the Knights wear conservative dark blue dinner jackets, maintains a professional approach while preserving the popular college appeal. They have appeared with Arthur Godfrey, Mickey Rooney, Gene Krupa, the Highwaymen, Stan Rubin and his orchestra and many other professional entertainers. All is not work because the Knights certainly spread the Hoya Saxa College sound to many girls' schools and also sing with the Glee Club. Next year the Knights will be coached by Mr. Louis Costabile, a Georgetown graduate, who coached the Buffalo Bills, the world champion barbershop group, and stars of "Music Man."

The Knights of Georgetown have compiled an impressive record and besides their present rating as "Washington's top college singing group" they typify the true "Georgetown Gentleman," adhering to a self-imposed strict code of conduct both on and off campus. As Georgetown's ambassadors, they have manifested a loyalty and enthusiasm for our Alma Mater which deserves our recognition.

On the sixteenth of September the Knights of Georgetown will record professionally with the Vernon Studios. The record of Christopher Robin is Saying his Prayers will be available at your record dealer. Any proceeds will be placed in trust for the group to insure their yearly expenses and to begin a trust fund for scholarships.
"For Courage and Devotion"

Telephone men and women fulfill a long tradition

Kenneth E. Ferguson, Installer-Repairman, Newport News, Virginia. On route to a repair job, he came upon a burning house where a blind, bedridden woman lay helpless. Ripping out a window, he and a policeman entered the flaming room. They were forced out by intense heat and smoke. Mr. Ferguson ran to a nearby house for blankets. Wrapped in wet blankets, the two men re-entered and rescued the woman.

Mrs. Dorothy Crozier, Operator, San Rafael, California. She took a call from a frantic mother whose small son had stopped breathing. After notifying both ambulance and fire department, Mrs. Crozier realized that traffic was heavy and time short. Over the telephone, she taught the mother mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. The boy was breathing when firemen arrived. Doctors credit his life to her alertness.

Charles J. Gilman, Communications Serviceman, Bellwood, Illinois. Driving to an assignment, he saw an overturned car and found a man under it bleeding profusely. Cautioning bystanders not to smoke, he helped remove the victim. The man’s arm was almost severed below the shoulder and he seemed in shock. Mr. Gilman applied a tourniquet and kept pressure on it until an ambulance arrived.

Leonard C. Jones, Supplies Serviceman, Morgantown, West Virginia. He noticed a neighboring house on fire. Rushing to it, he helped a father rescue three young children. Then he plunged back into the burning building and, guided only by cries through the choking smoke, found and saved another child who was hiding under a couch in the blazing living room. Minutes after he left, the wooden house collapsed.

Franklin Daniel Gurtner, Station Installer, Auburn, Washington. He heard a request for emergency breathing equipment on his radio monitor and hurried to the address, where a baby was strangling. He found the child’s air passage was blocked, cleared it, and successfully administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Then the fire department arrived and applied oxygen to help overcome shock.

The first telephone call ever made was a call for help as Alexander Graham Bell spilled acid on his clothes: “Come here, Mr. Watson, I want you!”

Ever since that fateful evening in 1876, telephone people have been responding to calls for help—and training to supply it.

A tradition of service—a knowledge of first aid—an instinct to help—these keep operators at their posts in fire or flood—send linemen out to battle blizzards or hurricanes—and save lives many times in many ways.

Over the years, the Bell System has awarded 1,896 medals to employees for courage, initiative and accomplishment—for being good neighbors both on the job and off it. Here are some recent winners:

Dennis P. Dowd, Georgetown College, 1908, was the first American to leave his country in 1914 to fight for the Allied cause. A few other United States citizens were already in Europe when war was declared, and joined the Allied armed forces at about the same time Dowd did; but no American before Dowd made a special journey from American shores for the sole purpose of enlisting.

On August 26, 1914, in Paris, he enrolled in the French Foreign Legion. Later transferring to an Infantry Regiment of the French Army, he was wounded during the Champagne offensive of September-October 1915. When again ready for service he volunteered for the French Air Service, where he made an unusually brilliant record while training and won the rank of First Lieutenant. He was accidentally killed on August 12, 1916, at the time of his fatal crash he was engaged to Miss Paulette Parent de Saint Ilin, of Neuilly, France. He is buried at Saint Germaine, France.

Nordhoff and Hall, in their book, The Lafayette Flying Corps, make this comment on Dowd:

His loss was an irreparable one to the Franco-American Corps, as it was then called; but coming as it did, when the American attitude toward the Allied cause was still undefined, the news [of his death] went abroad and did much to enlist American sympathy on the side of liberty-loving nations.

The year 1964 is the golden anniversary of Dowd's enlistment. He is one of Georgetown's authentic "greats," and he deserves more recognition than he has hitherto received.

While at Georgetown he was a good student and was popular with his classmates. He was one of the executive editors of the College Journal; one of the best of his contributions to that publication was a really beautifully done article on the apparitions of the Blessed Mother at Lourdes.

After graduation from the Hilltop he studied law at Columbia University. Later he practiced his profession during two years in Birmingham, Alabama, and afterward in New York City. His native town was Sea Cliff, New Jersey, but Brooklyn also claimed him because of his professional associations there.

In 1933 plans were undertaken by some Georgetown alumni and other friends of Dowd to raise funds for a suitable memorial to his memory. Among those interested in the project at that time was an old war buddy of Dowd's and also an executive of Time Magazine. Much enthusiasm was generated but the enterprise later died.

What more appropriate moment for reviving the campaign to honor Georgetown's first volunteer of World War I than the 175th anniversary of his Alma Mater and the 50th year after his entrance into the French Army?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

May 7, 1963

Dear Dr. Keegan,

I received a copy of Lambert Spronck's letter to you on the Georgetown-to-Georgetown Program. I was very happy to learn of its success, since you and Father Sellinger and I spent considerable time discussing it and applying for a grant. It is something that should awaken interest of the students in the community of Washington and especially in the Georgetown community.

I have always wanted this and several times contemplated securing a special secretary to comb the region in terms of research, and draw up some plans for bringing these people on the campus.

However, my limited time for anything except operating the University and trying to secure funds for its enlarged program prevented me from fulfilling this desire. Personally, with all the Georgetown people I meet — and I do meet some of the highly reputable ones — I have always found them eager about the University and invited them to the campus by placing their names and addresses on my invitation list. Generally speaking, as far as I can gather, among these people the University has an excellent reputation, and if more fail to visit, it is probably the fear that we wish to remain isolated.

I agree with Lambert's statement expressed in the letter, "I think that a God-centered university can open its arms and its mind to those around it, rather than keeping them closed."

In fact, my own experience over forty years could be summed up as follows: first, factually that I have dealt with as many non-Catholics, if not more, than with Catholics, as President of Loyola College, Baltimore, as Director of Pageants and playwriting in my early life, as a Professor of Psychology, etc. I have never found my Catholicity to be a barrier in any way to approaching non-Catholics. I was President of the Board of Trustees of the Mental Hygiene Society of Maryland, which did not have one other Catholic on this Board. An Episcopal Minister, who was the Treasurer, used to bring me home from the meetings.

If a person truly understands his Catholicity, and has a good intellectual background, as well as theological and psychological, he will experience more real, inner freedom for association and rapport with people of all races and creeds. He will be really centered in Christ, Who welcomed the Samaritan woman, healed the daughter of the pagan women, and associated with sinners and publicans. The fundamental law of Catholicity is charity, which St. Paul says is the greatest of all virtues. My own slogan which diffuses all my thoughts I find in the recitation of the daily breviary, Dominus autem diroget corda et corpora nostra in caritate die in patientia Christi.

My notion of zeal, which every true Christian should possess for the promotion of God's kingdom, should animate him or her to love all souls not for the explicit purpose of a conversion, but just because they are souls made to the image and likeness of God.

It has been my experience that the Georgetown Alumnus throughout the country has his religion pervading his whole being in a truly cultural way, as opposed to "wearing it on his sleeve."

These are just some thoughts which I wanted to write as an expression of my personal gratification over the success of the Georgetown-to-Georgetown Program.

With sentiments of esteem for all those students who cooperated with you in this, and with highest personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,
EDWARD B. BUNN, S.J.

WHERE THERE'S A WILL

A GIFT TO GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY
WASHINGTON, D. C.

In memory of my Father John Mullan, (St. John's College, Annapolis, 1847, West Point, 1852) and his great friendship for Father de Smet, S.J., beginning with their meeting in the wilderness (now Missoula, Montana) where Father de Smet established many Indian Missions, and where my Father and his men camped, when surveying and building the Military (wagon) Road, ordered by the War Department, over which the N.P.R.R. now goes.

See Report on construction of a Military Road from Fort Walla Walla to Fort Benton, pages 51, 52, 53 on Indian Missions, and tribute to Father de Smet.

(Mullan's Military Road Report, 1863).

"The Country and the Indians are mainly indebted to the zealous labor of the Reverend Father de Smet in establishing all these Missions, for he is truly the great father of these Rocky Mountain Missionaries.

"By his travels and his labors and the dedication of years to this noble task, he has left a name in the mountains revered by all who knew him and a household god with every Indian who reveres the black gown.

"His early work, called the 'Oregon Missions' is replete with interesting information, and from which we ourselves have collected many geographical and statistical facts.

"To him and his co-laborers in their self-sacrificing work, I return my thanks for their many kindnesses with the hope that they may live to see the full fruits of their zeal and toil amid the fastnesses of the Rocky Mountains."

Dear Georgetown Alumni:

This year marks the 175th Anniversary of the founding of our fine school. John Carroll Weekend will be held September 27, 28, and 29 this year. In conjunction with this traditional affair which will be directed by the College Class of 1965, a University Carnival is being inaugurated under the direction of the same class.

This Carnival is designed to enable the University students to aid their school while they are still attending it. This is our own Alliance for Progress. The entire profit of this function will be given to the Dean of the College to be used at his discretion for the betterment of Georgetown. One of the uses suggested is a scholarship program to enable us to give financial aid to some of the brilliant scholars who are unable to attend Georgetown at present due to the limited financial help available to them.

We therefore invite any and all of our Alumni who live in the vicinity or will be present in Washington during the run of the Carnival to attend. Please bring your family as this will be a real fine event for all age groups. Games, rides, prizes are among the many features of this event.

The hours will be: Friday, the 27th from 6:00 P.M. until 12:00. Saturday and Sunday, the 28th and 29th from 1:00 P.M. until 11:00.

Yours truly,
EDWARD J. CARROLL

 Book Review

The author of this book is a graduate of Georgetown Law School, Dean of Boston College Law School, writer of many popular legal articles on church-state questions, and a frequent participant in platform discussions on problems involving religion and education. It is this academic and practical training which qualifies Father Drinan to write Religion, The Courts, And Public Policy. But what makes this book such a successful and satisfying production is that its author is gifted with a lucid and incisive literary style, possesses excellent judgment, and has the rare ability of being able to state fairly and succinctly the positions of all parties to a controversy, and to judge these positions with dispassionate objectivity.

In spite of Father Drinan's legal, philosophical, and theological background, his book is not weighted with legalisms; nor is it a theoretical diquisition on the philosophy of education. It is, rather, a highly readable, but extremely sound, discussion of the question of "what should be the public policy in the United States toward religion and the public schools, toward non-public schools, and toward non-Christians and non-believers in such matters as Sunday laws?" The eight chapters of this treatise can be recommended to all: lawyers and non-lawyers, those who know little about the matter and those who know much but desire to be given new insights.

To this reviewer the most satisfying section of the book is chapter three where the author applies his well honed mind to an analysis of the leading decisions of the Court on the subject of religion between 1925 and 1962, Pierce to Engel. (The book was published prior to the "Lord's Prayer and Bible" case of June 17, 1963.) There is no disputing the author's conclusion that there is an "open contradiction" between the Zorach opinion and most of the Court's other leading decisions in religion cases. It is, therefore, a remarkable manifestation of Father Drinan's remarkable restraint that he can still write: the high tribunal "should not be criticized too harshly."

The author's story of "Bay View's" Catholic high school is almost a classic in gentle irony. Father Drinan utilizes the episode effectively to demonstrate the "basic ambiguity of Everson" and to underscore the "elements of irrationality almost beyond analysis" which enter into the question of extending public benefits to pupils in private schools. The same point is made forcefully in chapter six when the author observes that virtually "no objection" has been raised to school lunches given by the Federal Government to all children, even through this action constitutes a "deliberate rejection of the settled policy of so many states." Father Drinan is justified in asking what would restrain the Federal Government if it now were to decide to give every child a dictionary?

This reviewer wishes that the writer had more space to develop certain other points which receive but a passing reference. On page 194 there is only a word given to the question that a denial of public welfare benefits to some children because of the school they attend is truly a denial of equal protection of the law. Readers should also hope that Father Drinan will sometime write more fully on an excellent point made on page 200 when discussing the fears of some that if aid is given for children attending non-public schools, there will be a proliferation of sectarian schools. The central point here that needs heavy underscoring is this: should not the government be ashamed that in democratic America many people are being forced to send their children to schools they do not want?

On page 231 there is reference to a theory that the Founding Fathers were "consciously" setting out on "a great experiment—the creation of the first secular state in Western civilization." The author writes that "although there is evidence to support this position, there is abundant contrary evidence." This seems to be too much of a concession and to overlook the fact that the "great experiment" of the Founding Fathers was rather with a new type of power structure and power dispersal, that is, an experiment in federalism. The First Amendment—which was meant as a particular application of the federal principle—was added to the Constitution largely to guarantee that America would not be secular by securing for the States their right to pass laws aiding religion.

In the Engel case, and in other religion cases as well, the basic error of the Court was its assumption that the public school is a government agency. Thus, it was simple for the Justices to draw the corollary that "state agents," namely teachers and school boards, had "formulated" and "imposed" an official prayer. But schools are organs to carry out the will of the people who use them, and teachers are the agents of the parents not of the state. Father Drinan puts his finger on this fundamental aberration of the Court on pages 80 and 110. A fuller discussion of the important point would be welcomed.

On page 5 the author writes that "the desirability of the separation of church and state" is something which "all Christians must" affirm. In the context it appears that the assertion is meant for universal application, not just for America. If so, then this reviewer believes that the statement needs great qualification and additional explanation. There is such a variety of "separations" that no one can commit himself to a particular form until it has been clearly described and understood. Whether or not any one form of separation of church and state actually contributes to religious freedom or constricts it is something to be proved empirically. It is the opinion of this reviewer that actually there is much less meaningful religious liberty in America than there is in England, notwithstanding — possibly because of — the establishment of the Church of England. He likewise believes that if "separation" were seriously suggested as a substitute for the "unions" existing in England or in the five Lutheran Scandinavian countries, English and Scandinavian Catholics would oppose the change as a danger to the spiritual well-being of their nations. He is also quite certain that the people of Switzerland — where an established Church exists in seventeen cantons — would be aghast at the very thought that the American form of separation, as now mandated by the Supreme Court, might ever be exported from this land to theirs.

Father Drinan writes that "the experience of other nations with respect to church-state problems is of limited value" because of the unique origin of America's founding. This is excellent counsel for men like Justice Black whose Engel opinion is so emotionally charged with reports of grim happenings in 16th and 17th century England when church and state were closely united. Perhaps a visit to 20th century England, Switzerland, and Scandinavia would help dispel the singular naivete of the Court and demonstrate to them that prayer in school or public aid to religion do not justify their portentous auguring. In other words, a study of recent experiences in other nations might be of the greatest value to Americans who are genuinely interested in seeking light for church-state problems.

But it is impossible for a writer to treat every facet of the complicated church-state question within 260 pages. That Father Drinan has been able to digest such a vast amount of material and to present it with such clarity and exactness in this medium sized volume is a tribute to his rare skill. This reviewer can think of no other book which will contribute more in helping people in this country to formulate a workable public policy for America in that which concerns the relations of church and state.

ANNOUNCING THE PUBLICATION OF

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY:
THE MIDDLE YEARS
1840-1900

by Joseph T. Durkin, S.J.

This, the second volume of the history of the University, brings the Georgetown Story up to the beginning of the twentieth century. It covers the period of the development of John Carroll's little "Academy on the Potowmack" into a full-fledged university complete with Law and Medical Schools, and a Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. This is the period also of the first real flowering of the College of Liberal Arts to a position of excellence among her peers. Important too in its own way is the story of Georgetown's rise to national leadership in intercollegiate athletics. Some of Georgetown's greatest teachers and administrators, Jesuit and Lay, dominate this era; their profiles are given in this volume. In the background, as the story progresses, is the Healy Building, built in the mid-century and symbolizing through its soaring and sweeping dimensions the aspirations of Georgetown's makers.

Publication date: October 1, 1963, during the first phase of the 175th Anniversary Commemoration. Publisher: Georgetown University Press. Orders received at The University Bookstore.

We didn’t invent VSP’s
we just recognized them

VSP’s are Very Special People—in our book, automobile owners who are more mature and responsible than most, far better drivers than the average.

We decided it was unfair to charge this select group the same rates for the same coverages that applied to the average driver. So we came up with the VSP Auto Policy—a Very Special Policy for Very Special People. Now they get better than average coverage at moderate cost.

In fact, whenever drivers merit preferred treatment, they get it from Farmers. We like to find new ways to serve you, new ways to cut your costs—in every phase of the complete line of insurance Farmers offers—LIFE, FIRE and AUTO, as well as business insurance.

PAY FOR YOUR PROTECTION AS YOU USE IT. Farmers exclusive Prematic Payment Plan* consolidates ALL your Farmers insurance premiums, lets you handle them in a single payment each month, if you wish. This sensible, modern way to pay avoids depletion of operating capital, keeps personal budgets on an even keel.

Call your Farmers Agent for ALL your insurance.
