One of Georgetown's longest-lived and devoted associations came to an end on February 1, 1964, when James Star Ruby, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, died suddenly at his home in Washington. For Jim Ruby loved Georgetown with a deep devotion that has not been equaled in his forty-year association with the University.

This man of indefatigability and puckish humor first came to Georgetown as a college freshman in 1923. He had an impish smile, a tennis racket and an attractive sister and, notwithstanding the fact that he was a day student, soon became popularly involved in all sorts of campus activities.

The Georgetown of 1923 was still charged with the spirit of World War I; and Jim Ruby, more than almost any other student thought of Georgetown as a place of romantic attachment. He wrote of the Healy building as being rain-drenched and of its towers as shimmering in the moonlight. A Georgetown College Journal competition induced him to write:

"Listen! there comes through the darkness
The song of Old Georgetown's bell
Chanting the hour of midnight
To the echoes that know it so well.

"It sings o'er the silent river,
Each ripple with melody thrills,
And teaches its song to the waters
That race from Maryland's hills.

"It's whispered by stately pine trees
That guard Virginia's shore
And loses itself in the valleys
To be sung by the echoes once more.

"On rush the laughing waters
And ever the song repeat
Till the echoes sing with the pine trees
Where hill and lowlands meet."

A year or two later when he was actively connected with the College Journal, I suggested to him that together we might make a compilation of verse written by Georgetown students from the time of William Gaston to that day. He gladly accepted the suggestion and together we spent the next year and a half scouring through the old College Journals and through the Archives and the Riggs Library, to which we were given the access which was denied to all other students. At long last we published, in 1927, the volume of Georgetown verse entitled The Georgetown Anthology.

While still a student at the College, Jim became employed in the Treasurer's Office and later in the Office of the Registrar. Following his graduation, with the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1927, he continued to work in the Registrar's Office while studying for his Master of Arts degree which he received in 1928. Meanwhile he was appointed an Instructor in the English Department. He continued with his studies and was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1930.

As Professor Ruby, he enjoyed his daily contact with the freshmen to whom he tried to impart a love for Shakespeare's plays and sonnets. He knew each one of them personally. He evaluated their individual merits. He developed in each of them an appreciation of and love for literature and, incidentally, for all things connected with Georgetown. And because, like President Wilson, he had an extensive collection of limericks, he soon had a reputation of being a "Young Mr. Chips."

By 1938, Dr. Ruby, as the students now called him, had become head of the English Department at the College. He could certainly look forward to a tranquil and hopefully to a productive literary life. But Georgetown had other ideas. Reverend Arthur A. O'Leary, S.J., who was then President of the University, approached the young professor and suggested that the Alumni Association be reactivated. Jim enthusiastically endorsed the proposition and soon found that Father O'Leary was thinking of him as the logical man to steer the affairs of the rejuvenated Association as Executive Secretary.

Jim was somewhat hesitant to give up his professorship and his opportunity to write, but his love for Georgetown and his zeal to make her alumni realize her true worth as an educational institution won out over his desire for professional advancement and personal glory. He accepted the office of Executive Secretary of the Alumni.

At that time there was no formal Association, but Jim found some Articles of Association dating back to 1897 and, with a little help, dusted them off, brought them up to date and placed the Alumni Association in business. His office was wherever he could find desk space and room for a few file drawers and address card files.

In an incredibly brief time he had a loyal cadre of enthusiastic helpers in all parts of the country; and when Georgetown celebrated its sesquicentennial in 1939 the University could proudly assert that it had an active and increasingly interested alumni. By this time his office was next door to that of the President of the University.

The secret of Jim's success as an Alumni Secretary consisted of his making the correct mixture of hard work, good humor and simple cajolery. He was a bachelor in those days—he married the former Isabel Harman in 1942—and worked long hours gathering together all of the discoverable data concerning Georgetown's sons. He compiled this data on cards. He published a four-page bulletin of alumni notes at regular intervals and encouraged alumni to send in notes concerning themselves, their classmates and Georgetown friends. In this way he built up a veritable mine of information concerning both living and deceased former students of all the various schools which comprise the University. In the course of time he produced three different alumni directories which proved to be of invaluable assistance to Georgetown men everywhere. It is safe to assert that the records which Dr. Ruby developed, retained and maintained, are among the best and most accurate alumni records of any university in the country. For them he received great praise. Many alumni secretaries from leading universities came to Georgetown to study his methods.

With such encouragement he continued to work long and arduously for the Alumni Association. Class reunions, which had fallen off to the vanishing point, began to attract large numbers of old students. People who had not been back to Georgetown for decades began to make hegiras to Healy each June. Jim doubled in brass during World War II. While keeping his finger on Georgetown’s pulse he served as a lieutenant colonel in the Army Bureau of Public Relations where he had charge of accrediting war correspondents.

When the campaign for funds for the new hospital was launched, Jim Ruby and his cohorts were among the group who solicited the funds. Then came the incorporation of the Alumni Association. The leaders of the informal Association were of the view that the Association could best achieve maturity and attain its objectives as an organization independent of the University. The University agreed and, in the course of time, the Georgetown University Alumni Association was incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware.

The vitalized, incorporated Alumni Association immediately embarked on ambitious plans, and decided that it should give to Georgetown a new gymnasium in honor of Father Vincent S. McDonough, S.J., who, during his lifetime, had furnished a nexus between the college and its old students. It took a long time for the alumni, unaccustomed to giving, to raise the funds for the building; but it would be no detraction to the efforts of Thomas A. Dean, Thomas Mee, Judge Thomas Egan, Charles Milton, or the other alumni leaders who worked so magnificently to insure the construction of the building to say that one of the driving forces behind the campaign was the indomitable and tenacious spirit of Jim Ruby. Once McDonough gym was completed it seemed that a new spirit inspired Georgetown and her alumni.

With the cooperation of the University, an Alumni House was established, and Jim Ruby and his now growing office staff were installed therein. Alumni were given the choice of paying $5.00, $25.00 or $100.00 annual dues; and it was surprising how many elected to pay the larger amounts. The Alumni Bulletin grew into a full-fledged Alumni Magazine. A program of annual giving was established. This program has grown from a very modest beginning to the point where it now produces several hundreds of thousands of dollars annually as a living endowment to help meet the demands of the University’s burgeoning budget.

When the Very Reverend Edward B. Bunn, S.J., became President of Georgetown he recognized the worth of the Association to the University and the worth of Jim Ruby to the Association. Together Father Bunn and Dr. Ruby formed a team of devoted workers for the good of the University. Since they began to work together Georgetown has prospered as never before in its one hundred and seventy-five years of existence. No one would say that Georgetown has grown only because of Jim and the Alumni Association. Father Bunn has provided the leadership, the imagination, the planning and the initiative. Father Foley and the Development Office have added their implementation of the plans for the future. But it is undoubtedly true that there are many bricks in the New South Building, in the Raymond H. Reiss Science Building and in the buildings which are now being constructed on the Georgetown campus which would not have been there if it had not been for the interest which had been generated among the alumni of the University by Jim Ruby and the Alumni Association.

Anyone who knew Jim Ruby will know of his dedication to the lost cause of the Confederacy. This dedication stemmed, I am sure, from the fact that prior to the War between the States Georgetown had drawn so many of its students from the Southern states. In 1961 he produced his book, The Blue and Gray, which gave thumbnail sketches of every Georgetown man who served in the armies of the North and of the South.

In February, 1963, there was a reception held in honor of Jim Ruby’s twenty-five years of service to the Alumni Association. Former presidents of the Association and friends of Jim Ruby and of Georgetown gathered from the four corners of the country to do him honor. Father Bunn spoke of his forty years of unselfish service to the University and of his own hope that he would be present to honor Jim on the fiftieth anniversary of his association with Georgetown. And now, just one year later, Jim Ruby is with us no longer, but he has left us a heritage and an inspiring memory for the times ahead.

On Monday afternoon, December 30, the East Campus Class of '66 teamed up with the New York Alumni Club and the Office of Admissions to host a reception for sixty of the finest high school seniors interested in attending Georgetown. The reception was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City. Twelve Georgetown students were on hand along with eight members of the Alumni Association. The purpose of this informal get-together was to provide the high school seniors with the necessary information covering Georgetown. The reception was a huge success in attaining this end. Numerous interested young men voiced their expression of pleasure at being able to obtain a close-up of Georgetown. The personal touch exhibited by the Hoya students and Alumni was of inestimable help in giving the high school seniors a feeling of familiarity. Hopefully, there will be several more of these receptions in various cities over the course of the year. Special thanks must be given to Tom Kane, Bill Moyles, and Dan Altobello in executing the New York function.

BASKETBALL

Basketball talk at the Hilltop traditionally concerns itself with Tournneys; each year a large segment of knowledgeable court observers feel that the current edition of cagers has the stuff to see Madison Square Garden's gloomy expanse as an honored guest of the National Invitational Tournament. The only drawback to the theorist's idylls is that Georgetown has only been selected for the post-season classic once, and that was ten long years ago. Athletic reversals are as much a part of the Hilltop scene as philosophy orals. Predictably, however, in the year when the basketball outlook was hopelessly clouded, the Hoyas are in a position to bid for a spot in the NIT.

On the eve of the season's opener with Maryland, Coach Tom O'Keefe announced that last year's phenomenal sophomore, holder of four Hoyas scoring records, and bona-fide All-East selection, Jim Barry, would be sidelined for the season with a knee injury that would require surgery. With only Captain Jim Christy, a brilliant shooter, remaining from last year's mediocree squad, the Hoyas were left for dead. Little help appeared to be available from last year's frosh squad and the "big man" was still missing on the campus scene.

O'Keefe found himself with eight capable ballplayers, none of them household words across the country or in Washington. Before the shock of Barry's loss dissipated, Georgetown supporters found themselves solidly, and more vociferously than ever, behind a team that had won five straight ball games, was the nation's fourth best offensive team and had what Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp called "one of the nation's best back-court combinations."

After five easy victories over Maryland, Fairleigh-Dickinson, American University, Manhattan, and Delaware, the dream seemed to vanish again as the Hoyas were solidly trounced by Loyola of New Orleans and Georgia Tech. The big rebounders were going to tell the tale and little Georgetown was through.

Nevertheless, 450 Georgetown fans made Philadelphia the place to go for Christmas vacation. In the Quaker City Tourney, Georgetown was pitted against defending National Champion Loyola of Chicago and was quickly installed as an 18-point underdog. To the utter disbelief of 8,000 fans the Hoyas whipped the Ramblers 69-58. Sparked by Christy's 30 points, a sticky, pressing defense, and excellent backboard positioning, the Hoyas rolled up a 12-point halftime advantage and used O'Keefe's effective semidelay to nail down the victory. Continuing the brilliant play the next night against LaSalle, the Hoyas again ran up a 12-point lead, but the bigger Explorers tore them down for an 80-69 victory. Present Missouri Valley Conference leader Drake smashed the Hilltoppers 89-61 in the third-place game, but O'Keefe and Georgetown had made their marks. The following week, the national "sporting Bible," The Sporting News, ran a full-page story on Washington's "dragon-slayers."

Returning home, the Hoyas were upset by George Washington in a game which saw Christy sit out the second half with the flu, but with the students back from vacation, the Hoyas whipped Canisius 87-78.

The Hoyas made the first of three television appearances against Fordham at Rose Hill and again used the delay game to advantage, gaining a slim lead late in the second half and going ahead to win.

After 12 straight wins in McDonough Gymnasium, Georgetown was caught looking ahead to a return match with LaSalle and was upset by Navy, 64-67. LaSalle, at that time ranked third in the East, came to McDonough for their scheduled television spot and ran into upset-minded Christy who put on a fantastic shooting performance before 8,000,000 viewers and led an 85-81 Hoyas victory, with 30 points.

New York television didn't appeal so much to the Hoyas as did the big regional telecasts, so Seton Hall stopped Christy, rolled up a big halftime lead, and held on to win 94-90. Down by 21 points midway through the second half, the Hoyas suddenly found the range behind Chuck Devlin's 10 for 11 shooting and the 18 second half points of Owen Gillen to tie the game up with two minutes left. The Pirates scored next and then stole the delay game from Georgetown's bag of tricks and ran out the clock.

St. Joseph's continued their mastery of the Hoyas with an easy 79-70 victory, despite double figure scoring by five Hoyas. Returning to McDonough, the Hoyas shot 58% and demolished St. Peter's 120-73, and then avenged an earlier defeat, beating George Washington 83-81.

With an 11-8 record, tourney chances appeared to be dashed, but Christy's penchant for upsets continued and the Glendale, New York, product produced 29 points, crossed the 1000-point mark, and engineered a big 79-70 victory over the rejuvenated N.Y.U. Violets, to give the Hoyas a 12-8 record.

As this is written, O'Keefe's forces have five games remaining, and a complete sweep would virtually guarantee them a spot in the NIT; however, three road games against Boston College, Holy Cross, and Maryland must be rated toss-ups. Despite eight losses, the season has been a true success, as O'Keefe has molded his scrappy little men into an outfit always armed with the giant-killing slingshot.

Christy, the school's fifth highest all-time pointsmith has averaged about 18 points per game for the season, but balance has been the key word with four men averaging in double figures. A pleasant surprise has been the play of 6'5" sophomore Owen Gillen who has contributed 15 points and 10 rebounds a game, including 22 points and 17 rebounds against a bigger Seton Hall front line. 6'2" senior Joe Mazelin has averaged 12 points a game all season, as has 5'10" Jimmy Brown. The little guard, darling of fans everywhere he plays, is a passing wizard. He has been contributing 9 assists per game, tops in the East, and gives the Hoyas one of the best fast breaks in the country. Senior center Chuck Devlin is two-tenths of a point away from double figures and has been the catalyst of the ball club, providing steady defense and smart play-making with a crisp shot which puts him among the nation's top 20 in floor shooting. The two top reserves and spot starters, 6'2" John Prendergast and 6'5" Jake Gibbons, have each had 20-point scorings nights and along with Joe Franz give O'Keefe an eight-man starting lineup.

CROSS-COUNTRY

With three of his standouts hampered all season by injuries, track coach Steve Benedek has been in the enviable position of thinking about a two-mile relay team that never was and conducting practice with one eye on the training room. Since the indoor season began, the outspoken mentor has never been able to assemble the relay team he had planned.

Last spring, despite the graduation of John Reilly and Charlie McGovern, Benedek envisioned a two-mile relay team equally as good as last year's record setting quartet; however, promising freshman Chris Perry left school and Ed Duchini, one of the East's best high-milers fell victim to burstis, leaving only captain Ed Schmitt ready to run on the dream foursome. In addition, junior Joe Lynch who did well on the indoor circuit last season, has been out with the flu and an assortment of leg injuries which have caused him to miss all but a few of the major two-mile and mile events. Sophomore Eamon O'Reilly, the top frosh cross-country runner around last year, also has missed most of the season with burstis.

Among the more pleasant developments for the board-pounders has been the presence of some real boards on which to pound. In December, the University purchased an all-weather outdoor board track, which despite its temporary fixings, gives the runners the best practice facilities they have enjoyed in many years and the first opportunity to run in a meet at home during the winter.

The indoor season got under way with an outdoor meet, run on the board track, which was planned as a development meet and as a part of the 175th Anniversary celebrations. The competition, run by Assistant coach Bob Jewett, lured over 100 high school students and teams from most of the area colleges. In the 20-degree weather, the Hoyas took most of the college division events, highlighted by alumnus Reilly's 2:11 in the 1000, and a sparkling 4:12 mile by Lynch. In the most exciting finish of the day, Quantico edged the Hoyas mile relay team despite a fine anchor quarter by sophomore Dan Lanigan.

On the big indoor circuit, Georgetown has followed Villanova around the track in every two-mile relay event. The Hoyas finished second to Villanova in the Boston Knights of Columbus meet and the Toronto Games, while in the Millrose Games they finished fourth, as four teams were bunched within 1.8 seconds. On the same night at the Boston A.A. Meet, Benedek sent part of his squad to the V.M.I. Relays in Lexington, Virginia. The Hoyas finished fourth in the Distance medley relay, but set a new meet record in the four-mile relay, as John Salcicci, Eamon O'Reilly, Dave McCann, and Lynch combined for 18:10.7 to better the old mark by 19 seconds. The weekend before in the Richmond Invitational McCann had won the mile in 4:25 and freshman Rick Urbina took the 880 with a 1:58.0 clocking.

At the big Boston A.A. Meet, Duchini appeared in his first invitational of the season and was nipped by two yards at the finish by Charlie Buchta of Quantico who ran 2:11.1. The two-mile relay team whose best time this season has been 7:35.8 was clobbered by Villanova and Fordham. The Wildcat quartet ran a 7:26.4 to break the old Georgetown world indoor record of 7:29.0. However, the Hoya mark was run on an eight laps-to-a-mile oval, so Villanova's clocking was recognized on eleven laps-to-a-mile tracks.

Both teams traveled to Louisville for the Mason-Dixon Games, scene of the Hoya world record last year, and the Wildcats left no doubt as to who was tops, breaking all records for indoor tracks of any circumference, whipping the Hoyas with a 7:23, very close to the world outdoor record. Duchini ran a 1:50 anchor leg, but took the baton 100 yards behind Noel Carroll.

The Hoyas were more successful in the Philadelphia Inquirer Games as Duchini finished third in the 1000, a step behind Carroll and North Carolina's John Dunkleberg. The winner was timed in 2:09.7, Duchini in 2:09.9. In the feature baton test, the Georgetown two-mile relay team without Duchini was lost and finished fifth. In the two-mile run, Frank Pfusing, a Georgetown alumnus, now running for the Baltimore Olympic Club, nipped Lynch who ran 9:15:4 in his first appearance since the opening meets, and a token leg on the four-mile team at the V.M.I. relays. O'Reilly finished fifth. In other events, Dave McCann won the open mile in 4:22 and Paul Perry the handicap 1000 in 2:14.2.

Although Benedek's crew has not fared so well, his two-mile team has been bolstered by fine performances from sophomores Jeff Moreland and Lanigan. The latter, a quarter-miler, has been running the 880 for the first time this year and has run well on the second leg.

SWIMMING

Led by junior Co-Captain Neil Bos, senior Larry Hauser, and sophomore Rich Sonntag, the Hoyas have their record to 4-5 after two opening losses.

In the Hoyas' 52-43 victory over Old Dominion, Bos put on a tremendous three victory performance, winning the 50-yard free style, 200-yard butterfly and the 200-yard individual medley. On the strength of Hauser's 1:00.2 backstroke leg, the Hoyas won the medley relay and led all the way to make their record 3-4. Sonntag won the 500-yard free style and took winner's laurels in the 200-yard free style in 2:09.9. The Hoyas bowed to Dickinson College 36-59 in their opener and were clobbered by undefeated Catholic University the following week 31-64.
Gallaudet was the Hoyas first victim, bowing to the fast improving tankers, 64-32, and over semester break, St. Peter's proved to be no obstacle, losing to Georgetown, 26-69. Against the Jersey City crew, the Hoyas swept three events, with Bill Prutting and Jon Baker taking the diving, Charlie Adair and Tex Griffin the 200-yard breast stroke, and Hauser and Dick Lezzi the 200-yard backstroke.

In a double-header with the Georgetown cage squad the swimmers duplicated the basketball effort against Seton Hall, falling behind early in the meet, but coming on strong in the late events to bow 40-55. The eleven-event swimming meets are decided when one of the teams scores more than 47 points, and against Seton Hall, the meet was decided in the next to the last event, resulting in Coach Joe Rogers clearing his bench for the free style relay.

The orphan team then returned "home" for a meet with Loyola of Baltimore held at the American University pool, and lost, 33-62, despite Bos' record-breaking 200-yard individual medley performance of 2:23.2.

Sonntag and Hauser stepped back into the spotlight as the Hoyas ended a 12-meet Howard winning streak, edging the Bisons, 49-46. Hauser, who is slowly regaining form after a year at Fribourg, broke the Howard pool record with a 2:23.5 mark in the 200-yard backstroke. The lanky senior from Norwalk, Connecticut, was eleventh in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, two years ago, with a personal low of 2:11.8 and as the season progresses, he appears ready to break that mark. Against the Bisons, Sonntag also set a Howard mark of 2:09 in the 200-yard free style.

Swimming away from home, as usual, the Hoyas drove to Williamsburg for a duel with William and Mary and were trounced 31-64. Hauser again set a pool mark, this time swimming the 200-yard backstroke in 2:19.2. Sonntag, who shows much promise, broke senior Lynn Fritz' 500-yard free style mark set last year, stroking the distance event in 6:01.6.

In the Spring of 1963, Georgetown University commissioned the most notable and majestic social event in its long history—the official 175th Anniversary Ball—an event for the entire University family (alumni, faculty, staff and students).

An Anniversary Ball Committee was constituted which tapped the resources and talents of the Alumni Association, the Faculty Association, the undergraduate and graduate councils and Anniversary House. In addition, a distinguished honorary committee composed of the Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the alumni members of the Senate and House of Representatives, Ambassadors and other distinguished alumni and friends of the University readily agreed to serve.

Saturday, May 16, 1964, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. was selected as the date for the Ball with "black tie" as the standard of attire. The magnificent Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton-Park was designated as the site for the ball. (This ballroom is traditionally selected for events which highlight the social season in the Nation's Capitol, e.g., Inauguration Balls, The White House Press Dinner, the Symphony Ball, etc.) A nationally renowned professional decorator will re-create the University campus inside the spacious ballroom. In addition, each table will be adorned with colorful displays in the anniversary colors of black, red and gold.

The renowned society sound of Lester Lanin and his orchestra will be heard throughout the Ball. Lester Lanin will personally conduct his orchestra in continuous music for dancing.

In joint commemoration of the 175th anniversaries of the United States Constitution and the University, the present governors and senators of the original thirteen colonies or their official representatives will attend the Ball and be seated at special state tables. The dance will be punctuated by a short but colorful anniversary pageant, featuring the famed colonial uniformed U. S. Infantry Old Guard.

The Anniversary Ball will truly be an evening to remember. Alumni electing to be patrons or sponsors of the dance will have their names especially listed in the beautiful Ball program.

Ticket prices are as follows:
- Sponsors: $50.00 per couple
- Patrons: $25.00 per couple
- General Admission: $12.50 per couple

Advance reservations are required. In anticipation of a heavy demand, it is suggested that tickets be purchased well in advance. Checks may be mailed to Alumni House, Georgetown University, Washington, D. C.

We didn’t invent VSP’s
we just recognized them

VSP’s are Very Special People—in our book, automobile owners who are more mature and responsible than most, far better drivers than the average.

We decided it was unfair to charge this select group the same rates for the same coverages that applied to the average driver. So we came up with the VSP Auto Policy—a Very Special Policy for Very Special People. Now they get better than average coverage at moderate cost.

In fact, whenever drivers merit preferred treatment, they get it from Farmers. We like to find new ways to serve you, new ways to cut your costs—in every phase of the complete line of insurance Farmers offers—LIFE, FIRE and AUTO, as well as business insurance.

FARMERS PIONEERED CUSTOM-MADE BUSINESS INSURANCE.
Farmers has specialized policies for every kind of business—providing complete no-gap protection, from liability to special life and coverage against loss of earnings.

PAY FOR YOUR PROTECTION AS YOU USE IT. Farmers exclusive Prematic Payment Plan* consolidates all your Farmers insurance premiums, lets you handle them in a single payment each month, if you wish. This sensible, modern way to pay avoids depletion of operating capital, keeps personal budgets on an even keel.

Call your Farmers Agent for ALL your insurance.
