The following citations were selected from BIOETHICSLINE, the online database prepared at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics for the National Library of Medicine's MEDLARS system. Searching the keywords autonomy, beneficence, casuistry, justice, and virtues, as well as the text word principlism produced more than 400 citations. Only the citations concerned with theory and principle in the practice of bioethics are included here—e.g., works about justice in resource allocation have been deleted.

Gudorf, Christine E. A Feminist Critique of Biomedical Principiplism, pp.164-81.

Campbell, Courtney S. Principiplism and Religion: The Law and the Prophets, pp. 182-208.

Charon, Rita. Narrative Contributions to Medical Ethics: Recognition, Formulation, Interpretation, and Validation in the Practice of the Ethicist, pp. 260-83.

Childress, James F. Principles Oriented Bioethics: An Analysis and Assessment from Within, pp. 72-98.

Armstrong, David, and Humphrey, Charlotte. Health Care, Sociology and Medical Ethics, pp. 855-60.

Beauchamp, Tom L. The ‘Four-Principles’ Approach, p. 3-12.

Campbell, Alastair V. Ideals, the Four Principles and Practical Ethics, pp. 241-50.

Cook, Rebecca J. Feminism and the Four Principles, pp. 193-206.

Dickens, Bernard M. Legal Approaches to Health Care Ethics and the Four Principles, pp. 305-17.

Finnis, John and Fisher, Anthony. Theology and the Four Principles: A Roman Catholic View I, pp. 31-44.

Florida, R. E. Buddhism and the Four Principles, pp. 105-16.

Gillett, Grant. The Pause and the Principles, pp. 743-52.

Gillon, Raanan. The Four Principles Revisited: A Reappraisal, pp. 319-33.

Habgood, John. An Anglican View of the Four Principles, pp. 55-64.

Hoose, Bernard. Theology and the Four Principles: A Roman Catholic View II, pp. 45-54.

Hope, Tony, and Fulford, K. W. M. Medical Education: Patients, Principles and Practice Skills, pp. 697-709.

Steinberg, Avraham. A Jewish
SELECTED BIBIOGRAPHY

Perspective on the Four Principles, pp. 65–73.

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

Wolf, Susan M. Toward a Theory of Process. *Law, Medicine and
