

Hi. It's Travis and Kelly again. Welcome back to the end of week four. A few of you have noticed that we slowed down the pace of rolling out office hours just a little bit. We did that just to give you a little bit more time to complete the material for each week, and ask your questions. So please take advantage of that.

You'll find some notes below the folder about a new feature edX recently released, which allows you to more easily share ratings and reviews of particular courses. So if you're inclined to give us a little rating or a review, you can find that information just below this video.

And this week, you're lucky. Karen and Maggie were both around, so you do not have to read anything else by us, which everyone is happy about. So Karen will be addressing your questions on collaborative reproduction, and Maggie will be addressing your questions on abortion.

So click ahead to check those out. We'll see you soon.